Connecting Generations Through Faith and Family Bonds

From October 31 to November 1, Missionary Moon Shin-chul visited District 1 in Heavenly Japan to engage with the younger generation, explore ways forward, and strengthen bonds of faith among blessed families. After arriving in Tokyo on October 31, he attended a meeting of District 1 Seonghwa youth leaders, where youth church pastors, Seonghwa department leaders, and other young leaders discussed the role of the next generation and plans for its development.

Missionary Moon also attended the West Tokyo Family Camp in Kanagawa and delivered an encouraging message about the meaning of a life of faith. He emphasized, "What matters most is what kind of people will live in Cheon Il Guk and what kind of culture we will create and live by." Reflecting on his own faith, he encouraged everyone to consider how to preserve the family-like community they shared.

Among the participants, Imanaka Nobumasa and Kana expressed gratitude for his visit, which they regarded as a special blessing from Heaven. They resolved to share the blessings and love they had received with more blessed families and to become a family that puts happiness and love into practice.

During a discussion with young members, they openly shared their experiences and concerns about faith and family life, fostering deep understanding and empathy. On November 1, a lively sports day featuring various games brought different generations together. Missionary Moon and the members strengthened the love and bonds of their blessed-family community and resolved to build an even closer community of faith centered on True Parents' will.
