

Looking for Volunteer University Chaplains (Young & Old)

Matthew Huish

July 28, 2017

Do you remember what you loved about university? Do you still remember what the struggles and challenges were for you? Are you someone who would enjoy meeting with undergraduates from our broad FFWPU community for coffee and a general chat about life, and perhaps a lively discussion on how to navigate a successful path through university life? If so please read on....

a career.

We have a large number of young people from our community going to university and we are setting up a network of university chaplains who can once or twice a term arrange to meet up with students who study near them. Travel & cafe expenses will be covered. You will be providing invaluable moral support to students who may have left home for the first time in their life and just want a chance to share about their experiences and meet up with other FFWPU students for a couple of hours informally to hang out. You may only be out of university since a few years yourself, or you may be looking back as someone who already has had a family and

You would need to have an ability to listen genuinely to young people, and also not be afraid to say what you think on a variety of topics in a helpful and constructive manner, when asked for your opinion. You would have some understanding of The Principle through your own study and through your lifestyle and be comfortable with providing a principled perspective on real life situations.

Consider whether giving up your time in this way might also enrich your life as well as be help to our wider community.

Please respond to the email below: universitychaplains@ffwpu.org.uk or call our HQ on 0207 723 0721 if you have any further questions or would like to apply.

There will be a one day programme led by those who have worked as chaplains previously to help get you started.
