

A Two-Day-Principle-Workshop with a youthful flair

Neumühle, Camberg, Germany, February 20. – 22., 2015

By Fritz Piepenburg

On Friday, February 20, several people from the Düsseldorf congregation gathered to make the journey by car to Camberg, our workshop center. This time we had two young guests: Miguel (22 ys) from Malaga, Spain who has known our movement and the Divine Principle for six months and Kai (26 ys), a Chinese student, who has been studying transportation technologies in Duisburg for two years.

On the way to our workshop center we stopped by the city of Limburg. Here we visited the beautiful old city and the cathedral: such an inspiration!

20 minutes later we arrived in Camberg, to be greeted by Anne Sölva who had already prepared our home for the next two days.

The interesting thing about this workshop is that it was organised by the first and second generation in cooperation. Lectures were given by Claus Dubisz (first generation), Takanari (Taka) Wakayama (second generation) and Benedikte Becker (second generation). This weekend experience showed us that it is possible to have a successful workshop with harmonious cooperation between the first and second generation.

Since our guests were young, they really enjoyed the young and fresh flavour of the presentations of our second generation members. And Claus added the vast experience of a seasoned lecturer.

Furthermore, the musical side was provided by first and second generation together, namely Heidi Wakayama (MC and guitar) and her son Taka (guitar and cachon).

Both, Miguel and Kai enjoyed the workshop in their own personal way; Miguel, as a relationship-oriented Catholic and Kai, as a hard working intellectual student, who is ready to strive for higher goals in his life.

Miguel is determined to participate in the next seven-day-workshop and Kai, whose origin is rooted in an atheist communist country felt so inspired to study more of the Christian Bible and the Divine Principle.
