Day 6 into day 7!

The last blessing I can think of associated with external adoptions is one I almost hate to mention because it sounds perhaps a little “mercenary”. But adopted children can become spiritual children too, not that our “batting average” as a family is anything to boast about. And certainly, whether or not our kids decide to join the church or not and become blessed, they are our children, we love them unconditionally, are proud of them and will support in whatever they wish to pursue. But if a significant number of couples would consider external adoptions, this could be an effective way to grow our Movement.

Final post tomorrow.
