The forum covered various topics. Associate Prof. Chang Chin-Fen discussed "Digital Transformation to Promote Women's Participation in Labor Market," focusing on how e-commerce can empower women and female migrant workers economically and provide them with job opportunities to build their confidence. Assistant Prof. I-Hsuan Lin's topic addressed the importance of national policies on work-family conflict and women's economic empowerment. Ms. Ruo-Xi Chen and Dr. Chiao-Yu Yang jointly presented on the empowerment of survivors of human trafficking among Chinese female migrant workers in the United States, sharing how the Garden of Hope Foundation in New York has assisted 200 to 250 Chinese female victims, providing them with psychological counseling, art therapy, and consultation assistance in presenting evidence to the court. Ms. Ya-Ching Chang presented the gender wage gap in Taiwan's current economic situation and advocated for integrating social work expertise with financial economics to provide more effective service assistance to economically vulnerable groups.

This parallel event attracted 60 online participants and 25 in-person attendees, totaling 85 beneficiaries. The majority were from Taiwan, with participants also coming from Japan, South Korea, the United Kingdom, the United States, Burkina Faso, Canada, Zambia, Italy, and other countries.

Participants gave very positive feedback on the forum, expressing satisfaction with both the content and format. Many commented, "The speeches were very enriching, and I learned a lot of precious knowledge. It was a great experience." Several participants were also asked to share presentations, indicating a keen interest in women's economic issues.
