

UPF Song Party for World Interfaith Harmony Week 2018 in St. Petersburg, Russia

Natalia Chigrina
February 3, 2018

St. Petersburg, Russia -- A song party in support of World Interfaith Harmony Week 2018 was held in the concert hall of the Bright World community center.

The head of the Universal Peace Federation in Northwest Russia, Natalia Chigrina, opened the meeting with a greeting to the 35 participants of the February 3 musical evening. She proposed to spend the evening not focusing on national and religious differences but rather, finding common ground for creating a harmonious atmosphere.

Olga Plistik, a wonderful pianist and psychologist who has authored many musical and psychological projects, accepted our invitation to participate in the program. It was an evening of songs with live music. Responding to almost any "whim" of those present, Ms. Plistik performed songs of different times and peoples, for every taste, giving every guest the opportunity to feel at home.

Psychologists say that to increase the efficiency and quality of life, you need to be happy more often! A song often helps us in removing any stress! Culture and art open pave the way to unification. The participants could feel it by their own experience.

We would like to express our appreciation to all participants, the old and new friends of the Universal Peace Federation, for a bright evening together.
