

Taboos, political correctness and disturbing questions...

Jean-Jacques Elie†
September 23, 2018

Jesus mentioned: "Nothing is covered that will not be revealed, or hidden that will not be known" in Matthew 10:26.

Once upon a time in the Unification Movement, questioning was a sign of unfaithfulness and of a satanic attack.

Why then did God bother to grant each one of us with critical sense? After 30 years in the Unification Movement, mine was almost brand new, since I hardly used it!

Totalitarian ideologies and absolute closed systems of thought are spiritual tightly guarded prisons which can greatly restrain the flowering of individuals. They can momentarily appear as peaceful havens where everything seems to make sense for everything you need to know is supposed to be written in the all-knowing leader's book. You don't need to look elsewhere and you are part of the chosen ones. Your status gives you the privilege to shut your mouth, to work hard and to sacrifice everything for the good cause. It can be for a while a good training, but certainly not entirely satisfactory in the long run.

Is Unificationism falling into such category? Is this an impertinent question?

The challenge is to look at things from different angles or different points of view.

The viewpoint of how Rev. Moon sees God's point of view is not the only existing one.

I want to thank Jim McCann for setting up this fair discussion group where we can openly discuss the consistency of Unificationism and respectfully try together to question and hopefully get answers and clarifications on shady aspects of Unificationism we sincerely believe, or have believed was true at some point in our lives.

I wish to all Love, Happiness and Blessings of which no one can ever claim to detain the monopoly.