

Chapter 8
The Purpose of Human Sexuality

This lesson will:

- Show that all religions honor the pair system by teaching about its existence at the highest level of spirituality.
- Contrast animal sex with human sex to highlight the distinct nature and purpose of sex in marriage.
- Demonstrate that true love should be: eternal, absolute, unchanging and unique.

2.		Why should human sexuality be within the bonds of marriage? To answer this question we need to know two things: 1) the purpose of marriage, and 2) the uniqueness of human sexuality. First let’s examine the purpose of marriage.
3.		Mother Moon said,          We marry in order to resemble God (our Heavenly Parent) All religions teach that the Original Cause of the universe has masculine and feminine attributes often personified as father and mother. [See appendix.]
4.		Father Moon stated the same principle another way: Marriage is a statement that we will perfect ourselves ...
5.		To resemble our Heavenly Parent and to perfect ourselves are the same things, because: To perfect oneself means to complete the pair system. To do this you need to form a pair with a partner. Husband and wife together complete the principle of the pair system (see chapter 7). In other words, “I cannot perfect myself alone. Only in oneness with my spouse can I reach perfection.” At the same time, together with my spouse we (man and woman) reflect the nature of our Heavenly Parent. This is the purpose of marriage. It is unique from animals, since they cannot reflect fully the nature of God, our Heavenly Parent.

6.	The difference between animal sex and human sexuality.	To understand the uniqueness of human sex, let's examine ... The difference between animal sex and human sexuality.
7.	Animal Sexual Behavior  "Sexual Suicide"	Here the male bee, the drone (right), is mating with the queen bee. When the drone tries to separate from the queen he cannot. When he does finally separate, it tears his abdomen apart and he will fall to the ground and die. Scientists have labeled this "sexual suicide." In this case, animal sex is unique because death follows sex. Human beings don't do this.
8.	Animal Sexual Behavior  "Sexual Cannibalism"	After the praying mantises mate (especially in captivity) the female may turn her head 180 degrees, bite off the head of the male and then eats it. This is referred to as "sexual cannibalism." This is another sexual behavior of animals that is not found in humans.
9.	Animal Sexual Behavior  "Big Bang" spawning	Salmon are born in the fresh water, then swim to the ocean and live there for up to seven years. They then return to the same fresh water stream in which they were born, swim upstream and spawn. They turn bright red in the process and soon die. This is called "big bang spawning" due to the red color of salmon at this time. This is another example where death follows mating.
10.	Animal Sexual Behavior  Sexually Active Only During Estrus	Elephants pictured here are in the act prior to mating. In the world of mammals, the sexual desire in the male is often triggered by estrus in the female. This is "the period of maximum sexual receptivity of the female."<sup>1</sup> This means that, in general, animals do not have sex during infertile periods. However, in human beings sexual relationship are not limited to periods of fertility.
11.	Mating Among Animals The highest purpose of mating in the animal world is to reproduce. Therefore, one male can impregnate many females, because the primary purpose of animal sex is simply to reproduce by having offspring.	The highest purpose of mating in the animal world is to reproduce. Therefore, one male can impregnate many females, because the primary purpose of animal sex is simply to reproduce the species by having offspring. But human sexuality has a higher purpose which includes having children, but is also of a higher order.
12.	Human Sexuality  Pre-menarche: 13 years Fertile Period: 15-45 years Post-Menopause: 45-60 years Infertile for nearly half our lives... But still sexually active.	Consider the life-cycle of the human female. There are three stages to fertility in women: pre-menarche, the fertile period, and post-menopause. From about age 45 until the end of her life, women are not fertile. This period can be as much as half her life, but she can (and should) still enjoy this holy and sacred relationship with her husband.
