

Remarks on Indigenous Peoples Day 2024

Laurence Baer
October 14, 2024

Thank you. It is truly an honor to stand before you, especially on this historic day.

I've been married for 45 years. My wife Muriel and I have five children, all married, ten amazing grandchildren, five boys and five girls, and an eleventh on the way. He's a boy and will break that gender balance, so I'm hoping one of our other children's couples will step up and even out that imbalance with another girl.

Our first four children were all boys. They all played sports. All of them were in scouts. Two became Eagle scouts. They were all competitive. Then we had a baby girl. She was our little miracle. We weren't anticipating any more children, but there she was. She was so different. She was wired differently. While the boys were out playing armies or competing in video games, she just loved to play house. For her, everything had a daddy a mommy and a baby. Everything. All her games. All her artwork. She could play for hours, taking care of her pretend family. Do you know who else is wired that way?

Actually, truthfully, that is God's heart too. And because they align so closely in that way, girls naturally resonate more fully with God's deepest heart. It is not an accident.

What do you think are the three most important things in the universe to God, and therefore to all of us as God's children, even if we may not yet be aware of it?

Well, the first is Love. Love is the motivation for God's creation of the entire universe. Love is the essence of God.

Next, is life. Out of God's love, he created this jewel of a planet, sustained by the perfect balance of the cosmos, so that it could yield forth life. That is described so poetically in the first two chapters of Genesis.

And the third is lineage. Our children. Our descendants.

Of these three, lineage is far and away the most important. Love is important, yet sharing love without children is a recipe for the end of the human race.

Life is important too, but any loving parent would willingly sacrifice their own life to save their child. Lineage is the key.

God's dream, for at least the 13.8 billion years since the big bang was to establish His lineage which would forever expand and multiply His love and beauty and creativity and joy. In fact, God's dream was a cosmic true love amplifier, which would continue to expand Love and Joy forever through His lineage.

First God created the plants and animals, then God created Adam. And the final masterpiece, the culmination of all of God's creation, was Eve. Why was Eve last?

Because it was from Eve's womb that God's lineage, God's greatest treasure, would emerge.

In fact, at maturity, God would have come to dwell permanently and eternally in the hearts of Adam and Eve. Each of us is meant to be God's temple, and each of us can connect to God in our hearts when we are in an elevated consciousness. But God created Adam and Eve to be His body. In oneness with Adam and Eve, God intended to fully experience and participate in the holy miracle of His creation. On that foundation, God would have blessed Adam and Eve in Marriage. And when they came together in love, God would be at the core of that love and would bring forth His holy lineage through Eve, his wife. She would have been the mother of the universe. She would have been the substantial holy spirit.

Quick question - Who here comes from a family where there was spousal abuse? A lot of silence. It's not something we are comfortable talking about, is it?

I was raised Jewish, and invited Jesus into my heart when I was in High School. My dad had been a very successful doctor. But when I was 27, my dad tried to forcibly change my faith. It created a huge gulf between us. Forty years later, long after he had died, I was undergoing an energy medicine treatment from my sister-in-law, who is one to the top practitioners in the world for Eden Energy Medicine. Once she began, to my great surprise, she said your father is here with us, and he'll take care of this healing, but first he wants to talk to you man to man. She facilitated an hour-long conversation between us that was life changing and deeply healing.

My Dad's father died of cancer when dad was still a teenager. But what I learned for the first time was that when my dad was 20, in 1941, most of his mother's family, still in Germany, were murdered in the holocaust. His mother, my grandmother, spent the rest of her life institutionalized with severe depression. So did his oldest brother. After that, my Dad could no longer believe in God, but instead had to believe in himself, as he guided the family.

It was not an easy discussion. We had both said and done things that hurt each other. When he had finally gotten all of it off his chest, he spoke to me and said, "I'm sorry". I said Dad, I forgive you. And as I spoke, my sister-in-law gasped. She said: I can see so many spirits of holocaust victims rising up and being liberated. Not just your own family. And then I apologized to him for the ways I had hurt him.

And she said that my apology comforted him deeply and he forgave me and we were both changed, both healed. After that, he completed the energy medicine procedure as well, but the real healing happened between our hearts.

So, you could say that my grandmother was emotionally battered, and became broken. My dad's family became dysfunctional and it came down to me. When, through God's grace, I was finally able to find reconciliation with my dad, it healed more than just the two of us. The healing went back up our lineage and even expanded outwards.

What about God's family? The very purpose of God's creation. Did that unfold as an ideal family? Or as a dysfunctional family? There was a glitch, wasn't there? Things absolutely did not go according to God's plan. Parents do not control their children, do they? Or in this case, not even their servants the angels.

God's most trusted angel, Eve's "uncle" Lucifer, who was supposed to be caring for her, and protecting her until her wedding day with Adam - he became unhinged. Eve was the first female human, and in fact, there had never been a female angel. Eve's beauty internally and externally was so powerful and so attractive to him that he was pulled away from his loyalty to God, and sought to draw Eve's love to himself. But she was to have been God's wife. For God, 14 billion years of loving investment and devotion suddenly shattered before His eyes. He was in total shock, and felt like he Himself was dying.

By the time Satan had worked over Eve, she was completely dysfunctional as a mother. Her first son murdered his younger brother. Yes, Adam and Eve had children and grandchildren. But whose lineage were they? According to Jesus, we were all born as children of our father the devil.

God's heart was so incredibly broken. Genesis 6:6 states that it grieved God's heart so deeply that he was sorry he had ever created mankind.

But God is the absolute being. He personally feels responsible for what has happened to His precious children. Each child, no matter how battered, how broken, how twisted, no matter their race, religion, no matter their handicaps. Every one, has infinite value. Like any loving parent, God values each and every child even more than himself. And in fact, God's ideal cannot be fulfilled until every last child is restored into full communion with His holy heart.

God will succeed no matter what. No matter how difficult or how painful. God is our Amazing heroic Father. God labored for millennia to raise up a people to whom He could send the 2nd Adam, his Only Begotten Son, Jesus. Jesus came on the National Level, to sit on King David's throne. God had made meticulous preparations. God carefully chose a holy and pure woman, Mary, who was just about the same age that Eve was, when she was tempted away from God. Mary demonstrated absolute faith in God, and through Mary, God conceived His only begotten son Jesus. In that sense, Mary stood in the position of God's spouse. So then how was Mary treated?

When she was three months pregnant, living at the home of Zachariah, Mary began to show. Zachariah and Elizabeth both knew that Mary was carrying the savior. Still, inconceivably, they asked her to leave. In Israel at that time, this was a death sentence. Adulterous women were stoned to death. Desperately, God intervened and asked Joseph to take Mary as his wife. But Mary's life was a continuous struggle and challenge. She was unable to fully stand as Jesus's Mother.

At one point, in great frustration, He cried out "Woman, what have you to do with me?" Jesus revealed, for the first time in history that God is our Father. He revealed Heavenly Father's heart to us. But not so much Heavenly Mother's heart. Israel at that time was not a nation of Motherly love.

The men ran everything with the logic of power. When the people of Israel were provoked, they collectively called out for Jesus' crucifixion. Jesus died before he could find a wife or start God's family.

Fast forward 2000 years. Now mankind is operating on the world level. For 2000 years, the resurrected Jesus has worked to manifest his spirit as a nation, the eldest son among all the nations. To lead all the other nations as siblings, on the path back to God's Kingdom. That was God's vision for America. But this time, unlike in Israel, God wanted His nation to reflect not just Heavenly Father's heart, but also Heavenly Mother's heart. This was extraordinarily important to God. How long did God work to prepare for the birth of America?

In fact, based on archeological discoveries, at least 25,000 years, but probably much longer. God guided the First Nations to America. God taught them and raised them up intimately. That song, "Oh Great Spirit" deeply moves me.

That is the favorite prayer poem of our organization's founder, Dr. Linda Lucero Nishikawa, a Christian minister and a Pueblo Hunka Lakota Native American. I created that song at her request.

Under the dominion of Satan, all mankind, even Christianity, has been unable to overcome Satan's 3rd Temptation of Jesus, which is a lust for wealth, power, and physical depravity. Jesus clearly proclaimed that you cannot worship both God and money. And when I hear that song, I can feel the strong heart of Chief Yellow Lark to walk upright in humility towards God and with great reverence for the creation. To live a life untarnished by cravings for material treasures or physical lusts.

Many of the First Nations were matriarchal societies. They had a profoundly close relationship and communication with God referring to Him as "Great Spirit". They understood themselves to be the guardians of Mother Earth, and of all creation, which was on loan to them from their future generations.

God wanted Christianity and First Nations to complete each other, and in unity, to create the nation that God and Jesus envisioned. Through First Nations, Christianity would inherit a much deeper and more intimate relationship with Heavenly Mother. The heart to transcend racism, and material temptation.

And also, a much more intimate understanding of and connection to the Spiritual Realm, which is to be our eternal home.

Through Christianity, First Nations would connect to Jesus, and to God's lineage, raising up their families into a realm of freedom and full salvation. Through the unity of both peoples, God envisioned a new culture and a new nation which would develop in profound harmony and resonance with God's heart.

10,000 years ago, 8,000 years before Jesus, God melted the glaciers and protectively hid the 1st nations from the rest of the world. It is said that the father contributes only the seed to the child. 99.99% comes from the Mother, who also invests the most to raise up the child with love. 400 years ago, the fruit of 1600 years of Jesus' efforts and devotion came to America with the express intention to start a new country, centered on God. Those were the Pilgrims, as Christianity's seed, bringing the very best of Heavenly Father's culture.

But horrifically... the father turned out to be a wife beater... and worse. Quickly the colonists veered away from their initial focus of freely worshiping God, and instead turned their eyes to the acquisition of wealth and power.

When Jesus was crying uncontrollably over the fate of Jerusalem, he sobbed: "If you, even you, had only known on this day what would bring you peace - but now it is hidden from your eyes."

400 years ago, as the settlers were sprinting westward, focused on what they thought was God's blessing, their eyes were blinded and they completely missed the actual blessing God had prepared. They could not see the mother's culture - First Nations. God's precious holy daughter. The intended mother America.

Actually, the first encounter between the colonists and the 1st Nations happened in Jamestown, Virginia. There, in a symbolic repeat of the Fall, the English captain, Samuel Argall actually kidnapped Pocahontas, the favorite daughter of the powerful Chief. She was married off, taken away to England and never returned. This broke Chief Powhatan's heart, and resulted in hostilities between the 1st Nations and the settlers.

In their lust for wealth and power, European Christianity trampled over 1st Nations. Of the estimated 1000 indigenous nations that were here when they first arrived, only 574 remain with any survivors. Estimates range widely, but surely tens of millions of 1st Nations citizens died as a result of the settlers' quest for material.

Those who did survive were the subject of a cruel and extended campaign by both Christianity and the American Governments to destroy their families, cultures, languages, and religion.

The America of today grew and developed in a horribly dysfunctional family, without a mother. There could be no greater torture for Jesus, than to see his children killed, tortured and brutalized in his name. Such is the evil of Satan. Like the drunken faithless Israelites at the base of Mt. Sinai, America today is worshipping a Golden Bull, which sits on Wall Street in Manhattan, a city taken from First Nations for trinkets.

In 1945, the United Nations was formed as the Family of Nations. America, Jesus' nation, stood as the elder son nation, providing most of the resources to launch the UN. In 1950 the UN voted to send a force to intervene in the Korean War. 22 Nations sent soldiers, but 90% of the UN Casualties were American. One of the most courageous and highly decorated American soldiers was Nonato Lucero, the father of Dr. Linda Lucero Nishikawa, Pueblo Hunka Lakota, and the President of Sacred First Nations for Peace. After serving bravely in World War 2, Nonato Lucero also fought in Korea, being severely injured twice.

He was awarded The Purple Heart, and The Korean Service Medal with three Bronze Service Stars. In June of this year, Dr. Lucero received a special award from the Korean Government on behalf of her father.

There were two refugees who miraculously escaped to the south from communist North Korea. One escaped in 1950, at the age of 30. He was liberated by UN Forces from the notorious Hungnam hard labor death camp, after nearly three years of forced labor and torture. He was freed the day before his scheduled execution. That was Rev. Sun Myung Moon, who had been called by Jesus at the age of 15. In fact, his liberation happened 74 years ago on this day. He is surely with us here today.

The other escaped in 1948, at the age of 5. Together with her grandmother and mother, the three women walked 200 kilometers at night time, trying to avoid the Communist soldiers. They were caught and arrested, but somehow, that 5-year-old girl charmed the hearts of the guards who then freed the three of them. Crossing the border into South Korea, that little girl began singing a song of freedom. If not for that song, the South Korean soldiers would surely have shot them, as was the protocol for all who were attempting to cross the border. That girl was Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon.

Reverend and Dr. Moon were married in 1960, and immediately began a ministry at Jesus' request to offer the Change of Blood Lineage Blessings. Hundreds of Millions of couples around the world have now participated in that Blessing sacrament. Many such Blessings have been presided over by the heads of state in their respective nations. Rev. and Dr. Moon came to America at the end of 1971, and in fact established the Washington Times, in whose building we are today.

Rev. Moon died in 2012. Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, now 81 years old, has pledged to reunite Korea next year. She is calling for peace and reconciliation around the world, as a foundation to bring reconciliation between mankind and God. She truly stands as God's Only Begotten Daughter, the Substantial Holy Spirit.

For America to properly represent Jesus, as God's eldest son nation, and to bring peace to the world at this time, we urgently need to be reborn. The body of Christ has been atomized into 45,000 denominations who are squabbling about how to be saved. And God's children have been divided even further among numerous other religions. America, America, please wake up We are all God's family.

We must come together as one family under God, our Father and our Mother.

Christianity needs to repent. America needs to repent. We need to beg for forgiveness from the 1st Nations, our holy, battered, mother culture. We are so sorry. We are so very sorry. We desperately need to repent.

And more than anything else we have to call out to God and plead with God to send down the Holy Spirit to take the blinders off our eyes, to awaken and heal our hearts, and to give new birth to America.

Today, on this holy Indigenous Peoples' Day, on the 74th Anniversary of the liberation of Rev. Moon from nearly 3 years in a Communist Death Camp, let us unite in repentance before God and pray for the liberation of America, of all those, living and dead, Christian and 1st Nations, who have been bound by the power of resentment and enchained by Satan. Let us pray for a great awakening and liberation to pour down over this nation so that we can finally fulfill God's vision for America.

Please join me in prayer.
