"Believers Are Being Treated Like Animals": Panel Exhibition about Abduction and Confinement in Kumamoto

by the editorial department of Sekai Nippo

To raise awareness about reality of coercive faith-breaking against followers of the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (formerly the Unification Church), the Kumamoto Citizens' Association for the Protection of Basic Human Rights and Freedom of Religion - chaired by Isao Tonomi (主海偉佐雄) - held an exhibition on abduction and confinement in Kumamoto City on 29th September 2024. About 250 people attended.

Toru Goto, member of Family Federation held captive for 12 years and 5 months by his own family and professional faith-breakers who attempted to break his faith

The exhibition featured around 60 panels explaining the damage caused by forced conversions, including the case of Toru Goto (後藤徹), who was abducted in 1995 and confined by his relatives for more than 12 years.

Participants, while listening to detailed explanations, expressed their shock, saying things like, "I can't believe such terrible things happened in Japan," and "They treat believers like animals."

In addition to the panels, a video of interviews conducted by non-fiction writer Masumi Fukuda (福田 ますみ) with victims of abduction and confinement was also shown. In an interview with Toru Goto, he recounted his harrowing experience, describing how he survived by eating seasoning and food scraps from the kitchen sink while being held captive and starved.

The organizers said,

"Kumamoto is the first place in the country to hold this panel exhibition. We hope it will spread across the country and raise awareness about the reality of the suffering of the victims."

The exhibition runs until 30th September.

Heads of 12 religious freedom NGOs appalled by Japan's treatment of Family Federation

In an article published by Bitter Winter, the leading magazine on religious liberty and human rights, 14th October 2023, 12 religious freedom NGOs, both religious and secular, protest the Japanese government's recent actions to dissolve the Family Federation.

They all express great concern that the Family Federation, formerly the Unification Church, has been held responsible for the assassination of former Prime Minister Shinzo Abe last year.

The 12 NGOs point out that after the terror attack on Abe, a network of lawyers and others "hostile to the Family Federation" used the murder of Abe as a pretext to revive an old campaign started by left-wingers mainly for political reasons. For decades, they had been afraid of the Family Federation's "successful sponsorship of anti-Communist initiatives".

described how immediately after Abe had been murdered by a terrorist, "press conferences and an unprecedented media campaign of slander followed."

The 12 voice their concern,

"We note, however, that with respect to the Family Federation, they have been reported unfairly and one-sidedly, listening only to the militant lawyers and to 'apostate' ex-members whose stories in some cases have been exposed as false by independent journalists."

The network of activist leftwing lawyers in Japan that is hostile to the Family Federation, calls themselves National Network of Lawyers Against Spiritual Sales. The letter from the 12 NGOs emphasizes that "spiritual sales" is a concept devised by opponents to describe activities by members of the Family Federation "that have long since ceased".

Indeed, the Family Federation advised "over-enthusiastic members" to stop such sales projects and condemned them in a public statement published 14 years ago, in 2009. In the years that followed, there were only a handful of lawsuits against so-called "spiritual sales" by members of the Family Federation. Most cases mentioned in media reports after the Abe assassination, are about occurrences that took place further back than 15 years. There have also been cases when the lawyers from the hostile activist network intentionally have tried to make the sales appear more recent by referring to the date a court case began, years after the alleged "spiritual sale" took place.

protest letter the 12 signatories state bluntly that a dissolution of the Family Federation will be a step similar to anti-religious measures used in nations like communist China and Putin's Russia, and that do not belong in a democratic country like Japan.

Also, the letter brings up several important points that must be quite embarrassing for the Japanese government.

1. The dissolution of the Family Federation is out of proportion with the charges raised against it.
2. The dissolution is not consistent with the Family Federation's law-abiding behavior.
3. The dissolution will pave the way to similar action against other religious minorities.

The signatories deplore the measure taken by the Japanese government, saying that it may "forever taint the image of Japan "as a country committed to democratic principles, including FoRB" (freedom of religion or belief).

At the end of the statement, there is a quote from a commentary on RealClearPolitics, an American website for political news, authored by two religious freedom authorities – Suzan Johnson Cook, who served as the U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for International Religious Freedom from 2011 to 2013, and Katrina Lantos Swett, former chair of the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF). The two compare Japan to totalitarian regimes,
