Beloved and respected members of the North American Cheon Shim Won family, how have you been during these challenging times?

Even through hours that felt like an endless, dark tunnel, you never wavered. Day and night, you offered tearful devotions, holding in your hearts only True Mother's health and her complete restoration of freedom. Before the depth of your sincere, devoted hearts, I bow my head in profound gratitude.

A journey of 393 days has brought us to this moment. Because of the unceasing prayers, tears, and sincere conditions you poured out day after day for True Mother's vindication and return, she was finally granted medical bail yesterday, allowing her to step beyond the prison walls. Opening this first door was no coincidence - it stands as a tangible fruit of victory born from the unwavering dedication of our global family, who moved heaven through 393 days of heartfelt devotion.

Yet, the reality before us remains heavy and harsh. With her residence strictly confined to the hospital where she is admitted, our heartfelt wish to welcome her back into the warm embrace of our families and churches cannot yet be fulfilled.

Facing this limited outcome after such prolonged devotion, it is entirely human to feel moments of deep weariness and ache, wondering why Heaven has placed another steep hill before our tearful prayers.

However, beloved Cheon Shim Won family - you who stand as the spiritual core and guardians of devotion - we must not lose heart or fall into self-blame. Facing this sobering reality, we are reminded of the profound spiritual insight of the teacher and mystic, Hazrat Inayat Khan, who said:

> "I prayed for strength, and Heaven removed not my burdens, but granted me the trials through which my true spirit is forged.
>
> I prayed for wisdom, and Heaven gave me questions and deeper problems to solve.
>
> I prayed for courage, and Heaven placed before me dangers to face and overcome.
>
> I prayed for love, and Heaven sent me souls in need of care and compassion.
>
> Not by lifting our burdens in an instant, but through the deeper and grander unfolding of providence, Heaven reveals that all our prayers have truly been answered."

During these 393 days, we sought an immediate, complete liberation for True Mother. Yet Heaven has presented us first with a reality to confront and a trial to overcome together.

This outcome does not mean our devotion fell short, nor does it mean our prayers were in vain. Rather, Heaven sees how we have grown through these 393 days and now trusts us as mature sons and daughters capable of helping shoulder True Mother's heavy cross. Her confinement to the hospital is not a rebuke meant to burden us with guilt; it is Heaven's most solemn and loving wake-up call to all of us living in this unforgiving world.

Even from her isolated hospital room, True Mother has consistently urged us toward "harmony and peace." Rather than granting us easy complacency, Heaven desires each of us to grow stronger, wiser, and firmly grounded as active embodiments of true love through sharing Mother's trials.

Now is not the time for aimless sorrow. It is the time to raise a new altar of devotion dedicated to True Mother's physical recovery and the full vindication of truth.

Before giving voice to resentment toward the world or collapsing in exhaustion, let us first comfort and encourage one another before our Cheon Shim Won prayer altars. Let us warmly take the hands of our brothers and sisters who feel weary from running this 393-day marathon, creating a haven of harmony and peace within our community. Our devotion should not be a task that pressures one another, but a genuine expression of true love that wipes away each other's tears.

The hospital room where Mother stays is not a place of desolate isolation. It must become a sacred sanctuary filled with the warmth of unceasing prayers, comfort, and devotion sent by our worldwide family. As we grow stronger through this trial, embracing one another to build deeper peace, our 393 days of devotion will bear full, glorious fruit in the way Heaven originally intended.

Beloved family members,

I express my deepest gratitude and respect once again to all our members across North America and around the world who kept vigil through dark nights, offering their prayers and devotion solely for True Mother. Your heartfelt conditions enabled us to overcome another formidable barrier now.

Amidst these severe trials, True Mother declared with absolute clarity:

"The truth will surely come to light."

Beloved family,

If the spectators in the stands tire out before the athlete fighting with sweat and tears on the field, they cannot give that runner the strength to finish the race.

The one enduring the harshest ordeal and the loneliest battle right now is our True Mother. That is why we, who support and attend her, cannot afford to sit down in exhaustion first. Now is the time to retie our shoelaces and rise with even greater faith and heart for her sake.

Instead of discouragement, let us hold onto hope; instead of lamentation, let us practice love and harmony. In our homes and daily lives, let us build a living altar of devotion that serves as Mother's strongest pillar and warmest comfort. When our unwearied cheers and wholehearted prayers unite, they will open the gates to Mother's complete liberation and the victory of truth upon this earth.

May Heavenly Parent and True Parents' profound comfort and true peace abundantly bless your families and your spirits as you faithfully keep this sacred altar.

Thank you.
