

CARP Las Vegas final two-day retreat of the semester with Neville Labrooy

Ken Doo
December 1, 2018

On November 30th to December 1st, CARP Las Vegas held their final two day retreat of the semester. With one new guest, three returning guests, several community members, and CARP members, this retreat proved to be another incredible experience for everyone. Guest speaker, Neville Labrooy, flew in all the way from Bellingham, Washington and inspired everyone with his unique twist on the Divine Principle.

Participants had the opportunity to bond and connect through countless activities and laughter, as well as go deeper into the Principle. Uncle Neville's incredible testimonies about his own life and how he came to know the Principle was a highlight for many people. His photos of him with his ten grandchildren and his wife as well as his endless stories of how much he loves his wife and family really testified to the Principles he was sharing.

This two day workshop was really a time to rejuvenate people's spirits and regain a sense of purpose and self. One guest even shared on the final night that she has gained a sense of meaning to her life, something she had been needing for a while. Other participants testified to the fact that Uncle Neville's take on the Principle had inspired them and helped them to understand their lives deeper. Whilst it was sad to see the final two-day retreat of the semester come to a close, everyone was eager and looking forward to the seven-day retreat coming up!

