

The Washington Brief: What Trump's 2025 National Security Doctrine means

Michael Jenkins

January 5, 2026

The Washington Brief Webcast

What the 2025 Trump National Security Doctrine means for the U.S. and World

Tuesday, January 6, 2026 @ 2-3pm Eastern

Register here now: washingtonbrief.org/register/

President Trump's newly released national security strategy is a roadmap for a strong American leadership and dominant global presence in the Americas, Indo-Pacific, and Europe. Emphasizing strategic restraint, does it signify a fundamental shift in U.S. national security priorities away from great power rivalry with China and Russia and from the U.S. traditional allies in Europe and Asia, which might lead to a more war-prone and less secure world, as Trump's critics argue? Or does it posit simultaneous great power competition and hemispheric security as mutually reinforcing?

Join Dr. Nadia Schadlow, former Deputy National Security Advisor for strategy, who led the drafting and publication of the 2017 National Security Strategy, along with moderator Ambassador Joseph DeTrani, commentator and former six-party talks envoy, and Johns Hopkins SAIS Professor Alexandre Mansourov, as they examine the meaning of the new doctrine being "pragmatic without being 'pragmatist,' realistic without being 'realist,' principled without being 'idealistic,' muscular without being 'hawkish,' and restrained without being 'dovish.'"

Tuesday, January 6, 2026 @ 2-3pm Eastern

(see flyer attached)

The Washington Times

FOUNDATION

PRESENTS

THE WASHINGTON BRIEF

What the 2025 Trump National Security Doctrine means for the United States and the World

GUEST PANELIST

Dr. Nadia Schadow

Senior Fellow, Hudson Institute;
Co-chair, Hamilton Commission on Securing America's National Security Innovation Base

Ambassador
Joseph DeTrani

Security Issues commentator;
former Special Envoy for negotiations with North Korea

Dr. Alexandre Mansourov

Professor, Center for Security Studies,
Georgetown University

Dr. Michael Jenkins

President,
The Washington Times
Foundation

President Trump's newly released national security strategy is a roadmap for a strong American leadership and dominant global presence in the Americas, Indo-Pacific, and Europe. Emphasizing strategic restraint, does it signify a fundamental shift in U.S. national security priorities away from great power rivalry with China and Russia and from the U.S. traditional allies in Europe and Asia, which might lead to a more war-prone and less secure world, as Trump's critics argue? Or does it posit simultaneous great power competition and hemispheric security as mutually reinforcing?

Join Dr. Nadia Schadow, former Deputy National Security Advisor for strategy, who led the drafting and publication of the 2017 National Security Strategy, along with moderator Ambassador Joseph DeTrani, commentator and former six-party talks envoy, and Johns Hopkins SAIS Professor Alexandre Mansourov, as they examine the meaning of the new doctrine being "pragmatic without being 'pragmatist,' realistic without being 'realist,' principled without being 'idealistic,' muscular without being 'hawkish,' and restrained without being 'dovish.'"

Tuesday, January 6, 2026 | 2-3 EST

Register at washingtonbrief.org

