Richard A. Panzer

August 25, 2014

Do you sing in the shower? Have you ever wanted to learn how to write songs? Well, this could be YOUR chance to develop your songwriting skills!

Barrytown College is offering 4 online courses this Fall. These 15 week, 3 credit courses can be taken for academic credit or just for increasing your knowledge, understanding and skills.

- In Conductor/Composer David Eaton's "Introduction to Songwriting and Musical Instrument Digital Interfacing (MIDI)" you'll gain an understanding of scales, chords, song-structure and their practical applications. You'll actually begin the process of composing, writing songs and utilizing digital media.
- In Rhonda Altonen's course on "Social Media and its Impact," you could gain become literate in different forms of social media and learn principles, strategies and best practices for cause-oriented, social media techniques to spread your message. You will gain hands-on experience by launching an actual social media campaign for the issue of your choice and track its progress.
- Or, if you're more of a philosophical bent, you could take "Great Minds of East and West I: Religious Thinkers" taught by Dr. Andrew Wilson, where you'll become conversant with the minds of the great religious sages. In the class you'll actually get a chance to "interview" each of the historic spiritual teachers, or enact the role of the sage yourself!
- In the online course in "Unification Philosophy," taught by Dr. Keisuke Noda, you'd gain an understanding of the philosophic implications, strengths and challenges of Unification Thought, and how to apply the ideas to real-life situations.

The cost per credit for continuing education purposes is just $165, or $495 for 3 credits. While the cost per academic credit is $1,000, a scholarship of up to 50% is available for those who enroll in the college, or $500 per credit or $1,500 for 3 academic credits. Federal financial aid including subsidized Stafford loans can cover the entire cost of the courses for those who enroll and take at least 2 courses.
