South London WFWP held a very successful afternoon tea event in support of the Macmillan Cancer Support on Saturday, 26th September. The attendance was limited due to COVID-19, so there were three groups of five women – however that didn't stop people from enjoying the tea and cake!

A video of a Ted talk about Anita Moorjani's near-death experience made a good talking point, and a nice prize of a handbag was won by two members of the audience who joined in with some fun games.

The keynote speaker was Ada Onyekweli, advisor to the Africa Youth Society, whose speech revolved around some main points: forgiving oneself and others, letting go of your worries, and striving for what you need to do and not giving up.

A total of £450 was raised for Macmillans – some donations coming from people who couldn't attend.
