The fair was attended by approximately 150 people seeking volunteer positions, and 38 organisations offering positions. This was organised by Westminster Council for voluntary groups. There were tabletop displays of activities, QR codes and volunteer positions advertised. We took email addresses of those interested.

There were positive responses from people: "I like the idea of reconciliation." "Women's role in peace-making - no one talks about this!" "Great incentive to have a forum for young women to speak on different topics close to their heart."
