We would like to invite you to participate in this program, bringing your ideas and wisdom to focus on building a better world together. Today, many social institutions, including governments, banks, and universities, exploit the citizens they are meant to serve. This presentation will look at the philosophical, ideological, and historical underpinnings of these institutions, especially banks. Have they strayed from their original role of serving society, to become concentrations of wealth and power for a few people?

See flyer attached.

We would like to invite you to participate in this program, bringing your ideas and wisdom to focus on building a better world together.

An integral society is a healthy society when all the social institutions, like the organs of the human body, work together to serve individuals and the common good. In the human body, the heart cannot perform the function of the brain. Likewise, a government cannot perform the role of a cultural institution like the family.

Contemporary society contains many advanced social institutions that have evolved for important reasons but have been hijacked for selfish or ideological reasons and become like cancers feeding on individuals rather than serving them.

Today, many social institutions, including governments, banks, and universities, exploit the citizens they are meant to serve. This presentation will look at the philosophical, ideological, and historical underpinnings of these institutions, especially banks. Have they strayed from their original role of serving society, to become concentrations of wealth and power for a few people?
