Forging partnerships to build an economy for peace, shared prosperity and freedom
Tuesday, November 18, 2025 @ 2 - 3pm EST (11am Pacific)

Today's program is a follow-up to the presentation on Louis Kelso's significant contributions to economic theory that was given during the September 27, 2025 IAED online conference on Headwing Economics. The speakers are volunteers with The Center for Economic and Social Justice, an all-volunteer educational center carrying on the legacy of Louis Kelso to create a Just Third Way beyond our polarized economic and political world of today. They will share the vision for creating Justice University -- a free ten-week course on the principles of the Just Third Way and the economic theory and insights behind Louis Kelso's critique and counterproposal of traditional economic theories, revealing how a true free-market system can be built to realize an economy of mutual prosperity. The Justice University course is being prepared for course credit with an accredited traditional university.
