WFWP USA HerTribe Thrive October - Cozy Moments and Meaningful Reflections

Katarina Connery
October 15, 2026

Dear,

Welcome to October's edition of HerTribe Thrive!

As we settle into the beauty of autumn, October invites us to pause, reflect, and appreciate the moments, people, and experiences that shape our lives. This month, we explore themes of gratitude, mindfulness, connection, and the courage to stand strong as women.

In this issue, we're excited to share a collection of features to inspire and encourage you. In A Heart to Give: Lessons in Gratitude from Handow Secondary School, we reflect on gratitude and the meaningful connections made through WFWP's work in Kenya. What Color Is Your Day?: Simple Ways to Add Mindfulness to Your Day invites us to slow down and notice the world around us. For a taste of the season, enjoy Fall Flavors in a Cup: Four Cozy Drinks to Welcome the Season, and in Standing Our Ground as Women, so Others Can Too, we are reminded of the courage it takes to create change and pave the way for others.

May this October encourage you to slow down, appreciate the blessings around you, and find courage in your own voice and journey.

SPARK OF INSPIRATION

A Heart to Give: Lessons in Gratitude from Handow Secondary School

A reflective piece by Dr. Katarina Connery sharing her experience visiting Handow Secondary School in Kenya as part of a delegation from WFWP Japan.

Through heartfelt encounters with scholarship students and their families, she reflects on the realities of poverty, the importance of education, and the dedication of Handow's teachers and staff. She also shares the joy and warmth of the students, whose enthusiasm and dreams left a lasting impression and deepened her commitment to supporting their futures through WFWP's Schools of Africa Project.

Read the full article >>>

TIPS & TITLES

What Color Is Your Day?: Simple Ways to Add Mindfulness to Your Day

Explore the power of color through a simple, creative activity designed to help you slow down, notice your surroundings, and reflect on how you're feeling.

This resource offers three ways to engage with color: a fun outdoor color hunt for families, a weeklong "Color Week" photo challenge for adults and older kids, and a personal reflection exercise using color as a prompt for mindfulness and self-awareness. A downloadable Autumn Colors activity sheet is included to make the experience even more interactive.

Read the full article >>>

MEMBER'S HUB

Fall Flavors in a Cup: Four Cozy Drinks to Welcome the Season

There's something special about a warm drink on a crisp autumn day. The aroma of cinnamon, the sweetness of pumpkin spice, or a steaming mug of apple cider can turn an ordinary moment into a little seasonal treat.

This month, we're bringing a little autumn magic to your cup with four seasonal drink recipe cards, available to print from our Member's Hub! From creamy, spiced favorites to a playful Halloween-inspired creation, there's something for different moods and occasions.

Check it out >>>

WISDOM IN ACTION

Standing Our Ground as Women, so Others Can Too

Wisdom in Action centers on the words of Holy Mother Han, offering timeless guidance for women seeking to live with purpose and compassion. Through a featured quote or passage and a personal reflection, we explore how her teachings can be applied in everyday life and community.

IIn this edition of Wisdom in Action, Eika Jung reflects on Mother Han's words about women's unique value and their role as partners in creating a better world. Through a personal story of collective action and advocacy, she explores what it means for women to recognize their own power to create change and pave the way for future generations.

Read the full article >>>

Our Contact Information

Women's Federation for World Peace USA

481 8th Avenue, Suite 1215
New York, NY 10001

www,wfwp,us

WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA

A Heart to Give: Lessons in Gratitude from Handow Secondary School

Written by: Dr. Katarina Connery, President of WFWP USA

A random post I saw on the internet ages ago has taken up lodging in my mind recently. It goes something like this: "If you go to bed at night with food in your belly, in a safe home, with a family who loves you, you have won the lottery of life."

This came back to mind in the wake of my weeklong trip to Kenya, where I visited Handow Secondary School in the rural (very rural!) town of Marakusi with a team from WFWP Japan. In the US, the Schools of Africa Project has been sending funds to the school for years, but this was the first time I was able to visit in person.

I am still digesting the experience, and the people I met and places I saw will sit with me—perhaps for the rest of my life. A few moments stand out as especially memorable.

The first was visiting the homes of several students who receive scholarships due to financial hardship.

"This is the path I take," announced Gracious as she led us to her home. For a moment, we looked at each other in confusion, but then we pushed our way through a field of sugarcane reaching above our heads. Over twenty of us crowded into her family's two-room mud house. With no electric lights, only sunshine streaming through small windows illuminated the dim room as we greeted her mother. In the cramped space, a low cluck near my feet alerted me to a chicken roosting in the corner.

The headmaster of Handow, Mr. Frederick Adanti, gently prompted Gracious to explain how she lives and what challenges she faces. In a quiet whisper, she shared that the biggest challenge is simply having enough food. We learned that she, her siblings, and her mother sleep on the floor with no mattress—only a sheet spread out. Another challenge is waking up on time, as she has to walk two hours to school each way, getting up at 4:00 or 5:00 a.m. I couldn't help but watch her mother. I felt her heart break as they shared their humble situation with our group of foreigners, who live in the lap of luxury by comparison. When I return home, I can open my fridge and find food instantly. When I turn on the lights, they work. Hot water runs from the tap, and my home is secure against any weather.

Even so, as her mother wiped away a few tears and sighed, she displayed such a beautiful heart. I could feel her pride as she shared that Gracious is often at the top of her class and receives high marks. In that simple space, I noticed small touches that brought warmth and hominess, such as fabric draped across the ceiling. The outer courtyard, with laundry hanging on lines, was simple but neat and tidy. She even offered us bananas before we left. Though she didn't have much, she possessed a deep desire to give and welcome us as guests. We received her warmth with gratitude, but politely declined the bananas so as not to take from her family.

There are many other students, both there and everywhere, in similar—or much worse—circumstances. In the face of such deep need, one can feel powerless. I cannot simply wave a magic wand to give them everything they require. My life has been blessed with safety and comfort by circumstance of birth, but those privileges are not easily transferred to someone else. The need can feel overwhelming. The best we can do is provide an education in a safe and supportive environment through Handow Secondary School, so students can take their futures into their own hands and support their families step-by-step.

Throughout my visit, both the deep need of the students and the dedication of Handow's teachers and staff—who give their full hearts to provide for these youth—were strikingly apparent.

Yet another experience stands out vividly in my mind.

After two hours of bumping along dirt roads, navigating the deep ruts created by rain, we finally arrived at Handow. I could hardly believe the mighty cheer that greeted us. Over 500 students were waiting, together with teachers, staff, board members, and parents. We formed a noisy, joyful parade as we danced down the road, attracting the attention of children at the primary school next door. Students played drums, blasted horns, and sang in Swahili. We were all grinning ear to ear.

Throughout our three days at Handow, the students repeatedly showed up with an energy and enthusiasm that was infectious. At the end of the day, even if our daily lives are vastly different, they are simply teenagers like any other—bright high school students trying their best, dreaming big, and sharing an amazing excitement for life. We were peppered with questions, curious glances, and warm smiles. Parting was bittersweet, and I frequently find myself returning to memories of their smiles and the conversations we shared.

Above all, I wanted to convey to them that even though I didn't get a chance to know every single person, there are people in the US who care deeply about them and their futures. The challenges of rural life in Kenya are very different from my own, and the need is great. But through Handow and other schools supported by the Schools of Africa Project, we hope to provide a safe, healthy place for these students to learn and grow—a place where the light in their hearts can be cultivated, giving them the courage and hope to build the lives they dream of. As the founders of WFWP have taught many times, life's blessings are not meant for ourselves alone; God gives us blessings so that we can share them.

FALL FLAVORS IN A CUP: FOUR COZY DRINKS TO WELCOME THE SEASON

GWPR QUARTERLY IMPACT REPORT (JULY – SEPT 2024)

WFWP Leader Resources

Become a WFWP Member

Contact Us

Search

48 8TH AVE. SUITE 120, NEW YORK, NY 10001 - INFO@WFWP.US
COPYRIGHT © 2024, WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA - ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PRIVACY POLICY

What Color Is Your Day?: Simple Ways to Add Mindfulness to Your Day

Color has played an important role in art, culture, spirituality, and mindfulness practices for centuries. Different traditions associate colors with different qualities and emotions. In chakra-based practices, for example, specific colors are connected with different energy centers of the body. While you don't have to subscribe to any particular tradition, playing with color can be a simple way to pause, reflect, and become more aware of what you're feeling and noticing.

Instead of worrying about whether a color has a "right" meaning, try asking yourself:

- What does this color make me think of?
- How does it make me feel?
- What memories or qualities does it bring to mind?

Colors are something we encounter constantly, but we rarely stop to pay attention to them. Take this opportunity to reflect and notice the colors around you.

Color	Common Associations
Red	Energy, courage, passion
Orange	Creativity, warmth, enthusiasm
Yellow	Joy, optimism, curiosity
Green	Growth, balance, renewal
Blue	Calm, peace, reflection
Purple	Imagination, wisdom, spirituality
White	Simplicity, peace, new beginnings
Pink	Love, compassion, tenderness

* These are "common associations" rather than definitive meanings. Your own associations may be completely different and that's ok!

SEE IT - FOR FAMILIES, KIDS, AND ANYONE WHO ENJOYS A LITTLE OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

Turn an ordinary walk, trip to the park, or afternoon outside into a color hunt!

Take our Autumn Colors printable with you and see how many colors you can find in nature. When you find something that matches one of the colors, you can stick it directly onto the printable if it's something small and safe to collect, such as a fallen leaf or flower petal.

If you can't stick what you found to the page, that's okay! Draw it or write down what you found instead.

Download Button for PDF

Don't worry about finding the perfect match. Part of the fun is noticing how many different shades you can find!

Make it a conversation: Ask your child, "Which color was easiest to find? Which was hardest?" or "What was the most interesting thing you found?"

CAPTURE IT - FOR ADULTS, COUPLES, FRIENDS, OR OLDER KIDS

Choose one color. Then spend the next day (or the whole week) looking for it wherever you go.

Maybe you get blue. Suddenly, you're noticing the sky, a car, a painted door, a store sign, a flower, or even a tiny detail you normally would have overlooked.

Take a photo whenever you spot your color.

At the end of the week, put your photos together into a simple Color Week collage. You don't need fancy editing skills or a perfect layout. Just gather the little moments you noticed. If you're doing this with a spouse, friend, family member, or group, have everyone choose a different color. At the end of the week, share your collages with each other.

Search "color hunt collage trend" to find inspirations from others online!

FEEL IT - FOR A QUIET MOMENT OF PERSONAL REFLECTION

Color doesn't only exist outside of us. It can also give us a simple way to pause and check in with ourselves.

Take a moment and ask:

"If your day were a color, what would it be?"

Don't overthink it. Choose the first color that comes to mind.

Then ask yourself:

"Why did I choose this color?"

"What three words describe how I'm feeling today?"

"What do I need right now?"

"Is there a color that represents what I want to bring into my day?"

Maybe your day feels gray because you're tired and overwhelmed. Maybe it's yellow because you're excited about something. Maybe it's green because you're feeling peaceful and grounded.

There are no right or wrong answers. The goal isn't to assign a scientific meaning to your emotions. It's simply to use color as a prompt to pause and listen to your own inner experience. You could even choose a second color to represent something you'd like more of.

"Today feels gray. I need a little green."

Maybe that means taking a walk, calling a friend, stepping away from your computer, spending time with your family, or simply giving yourself five quiet minutes.

STANDING OUR GROUND AS WOMEN, SO OTHERS CAN TOO

FALL FLAVORS IN A CUP: FOUR COZY DRINKS TO WELCOME THE SEASON

48 8TH AVE. SUITE 1215, NEW YORK, NY 10001 - INFO@WFWP.US
COPYRIGHT © 2024, WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA - ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PRIVACY POLICY.

Fall Flavors in a Cup: Four Cozy Drinks to Welcome the Season

There's something special about a warm drink on a crisp autumn day. The aroma of cinnamon, the sweetness of pumpkin spice, or a steaming mug of apple cider can turn an ordinary moment into a little seasonal treat.

This month, we're bringing a little autumn magic to your cup with four seasonal drink recipe cards, available to print from our Member's Hub! From creamy, spiced favorites to a playful Halloween-inspired creation, there's something for different moods and occasions.

Here's what's brewing:

- White Chocolate Chai – A creamy, sweet twist on classic chai, blending warming spices with the comforting richness of white chocolate.
- Pumpkin Spice Caramel Latte – An autumn favorite with pumpkin, coffee, and familiar fall spices, perfect for a cozy morning or afternoon pick-me-up.
- Mulled Apple Cider – A fragrant, warming blend of apple cider and seasonal spices that makes the whole home smell like fall.
- Spooky Sesame Latte – A fun, Halloween-inspired drink with a striking dark sesame twist, bringing something a little unexpected to your seasonal menu.

Whether you're making one just for yourself or preparing a special drink to share with loved ones, these recipes are an invitation to enjoy the little pleasures of the season.

Your October Member's Hub exclusive

Why not pick one to try this week, and you might even discover a new family favorite! Members, head to the Hub to download this month's Fall Flavors in a Cup recipe card for all four recipes!

ARE YOU A MEMBER OF WFWP?

The' Fall Flavors in a Cup Recipe' is FREE for members! Simply log in or create your account for the Members' Portal. You can download this in the Resources Library

Log in

Don't have an account? Sign up

Continue with Google

OR

Email

Password Forgot password?

Log in

If you don't already have an account, request a new one above. We will confirm your active membership and approve the request. Upon approval, you will be able to log in and access the portal. If you don't remember your password, click "forgot password." Please make sure to check your spam folder.

NOT A MEMBER OF WFWP?

Not a member of WFWP? Join today to access exclusive resources, including Fall Flavors in a Cup Recipe, and become part of a community of women empowering each other to be peacemakers in the world

WHAT COLOR IS YOUR DAY?: SIMPLE WAYS TO ADD MINDFULNESS TO YOUR DAY

A HEART TO GIVE: LESSONS IN GRATITUDE FROM HANDOW SECONDARY SCHOOL

Standing Our Ground as Women, so Others Can Too

Written by: Eika Jung

"The role of women and their inborn nature differ from those of men. This does not mean that they have less value and that their status is inferior. The unhappiness of women [in the feminist movement] stemmed from not realizing the preciousness of their God-given original nature and role. Problems arose from the fact that many women forgot what they possessed and tried to imitate the nature and role of men, as if men were the exemplars for women.

My esteemed women leaders! Women are the individual embodiments of truth representing one of the two natures of the incorporeal God, who possesses yin and yang in both external form and internal nature. Therefore, women are not in a competitive relationship with men, who represent the other side of God. Women are not the assistants of men; they are interdependent partners who make the world whole."

– Hak Ja Han, October 12, 1994 (adapted from the original)

In June of 2014, employees at the popular Massachusetts grocery chain, Market Basket, erupted in protest. Their beloved CEO was ousted, causing panic that the corporatization of the family chain was imminent. Market Basket has a special place in my heart too. Having lived briefly in a church center in midtown Manhattan, I'd struggled to find a way to buy food nearby for a group of 50 workshop participants. This exasperation resulted in an iron clad self-commitment that I would live near a grocery store, especially in a city. Years later when relocating to Somerville, God seemed to gift my family an apartment on my birthday, which sat directly across from Market Basket in Union Square.

At the time of the protests, I was very pregnant with my second child, working from home on my exercise ball, listening to the drone sounds of protest. I'd look out the window to watch the action. Employees refused to work and stood outside the store with signs encouraging cars to honk in support. Fresh produce spoiled in abandoned trucks; shelves were not re-stocked. Market Basket reportedly lost $10M per day. One night, I remember looking down as the streetlights illuminated a small group of protestors and thinking 'this is a waste of time, nothing is going to change. The CEO is gone and that's that.'

And then, the protestors won. The CEO was reinstated; the Market Basket we loved was saved. I was gobsmacked, honestly. I couldn't believe that what I had witnessed going on outside my window for months had actually made a difference.

When you are part of a movement like that, even on the periphery, not believing any difference will be made, but then it is made, there is a residual empowerment you are graced with. A bit like the shock waves of an earthquake that rumble under your own feet miles away. You can't deny the power in it. You come to believe in the power of democracy to move an institution/corporation to submission. It's a good feeling and it's one that women must experience.

And how lucky we are to be alive after such rapid improvement in the state and livelihood of women! Our female ancestors set in motion big projects that we benefit from today – The Suffrage Movement (1800s-1920), Property, Marriage, and Education reforms (1800s), Labor Movements and Workplace Protections (late 1800s – mid 1900s), Reproductive Rights Movements (early 1900s onwards), Second, Third and Fourth Wave Feminism (1960s - present). These women were warriors – their weapons: picket lines, pamphlets, the pill, #MeToo. Since we cannot go back to thank these women directly, we must pay it forward.

Women's Federation for World Peace USA (WFWP) is part of the movement too, offering education, community and social programs to elevate women. I can absolutely see a scenario where WFWP also trains women further to recognize and fight manipulative power, raising warriors who have the skills and strategy to challenge institutions. This is important because any change on a larger scale will also impact us at home, in our personal lives. A few weeks after the protests ended, I delivered a baby girl. And I was emboldened to request 20 weeks of maternity leave. I believe the residual empowerment of the protests encouraged me to advocate for my time off; and I won that too.

Thanks to the dialogue of WFWP and society at large, I would argue that the generation of women after Mother Han's 1994 speech already have a richer understanding of the words shared. An initial reading of her speech may come across very conservatively – is she encouraging women to embrace trad wife goals of domesticity? "...Women are not in a competitive relationship with men, who represent the other side of God. Women are not the assistants of men; they are interdependent partners who make the world whole." But the text is expansive enough to fit a 2026 context, implying that women will have unique contributions in all domains. What will those contributions be? The details and specifics are up to us to find through our experiences, as we pioneer new ground and pass along our findings to the next generation.

Toby Ord says in his book, The Precipice (2020), "A human, or an entire generation, cannot complete such grand projects. But humanity can. We work together, each generation making a little progress while building up the capacities, resources and institutions to empower future generations to take the next step." I know that WFWP and those who follow us will uncover deeper meaning and truth in Mother Han's words. I am excited to think of what women of the future will know about our "God given original nature and role." They might laugh at how we live now and how little we know, but they will appreciate our struggle as warriors seeking truth.

Some of those struggles will be big, like a picket line. Others will be as small as one woman asking for 20 weeks of maternity leave, and getting it.

In HerTribe, we are creating spaces where women can experience and practice radical self- love and compassion. If you would like to learn more and join one of our uplifting communities, check out HerTribe here: https://www.wfwp.us/hertribe

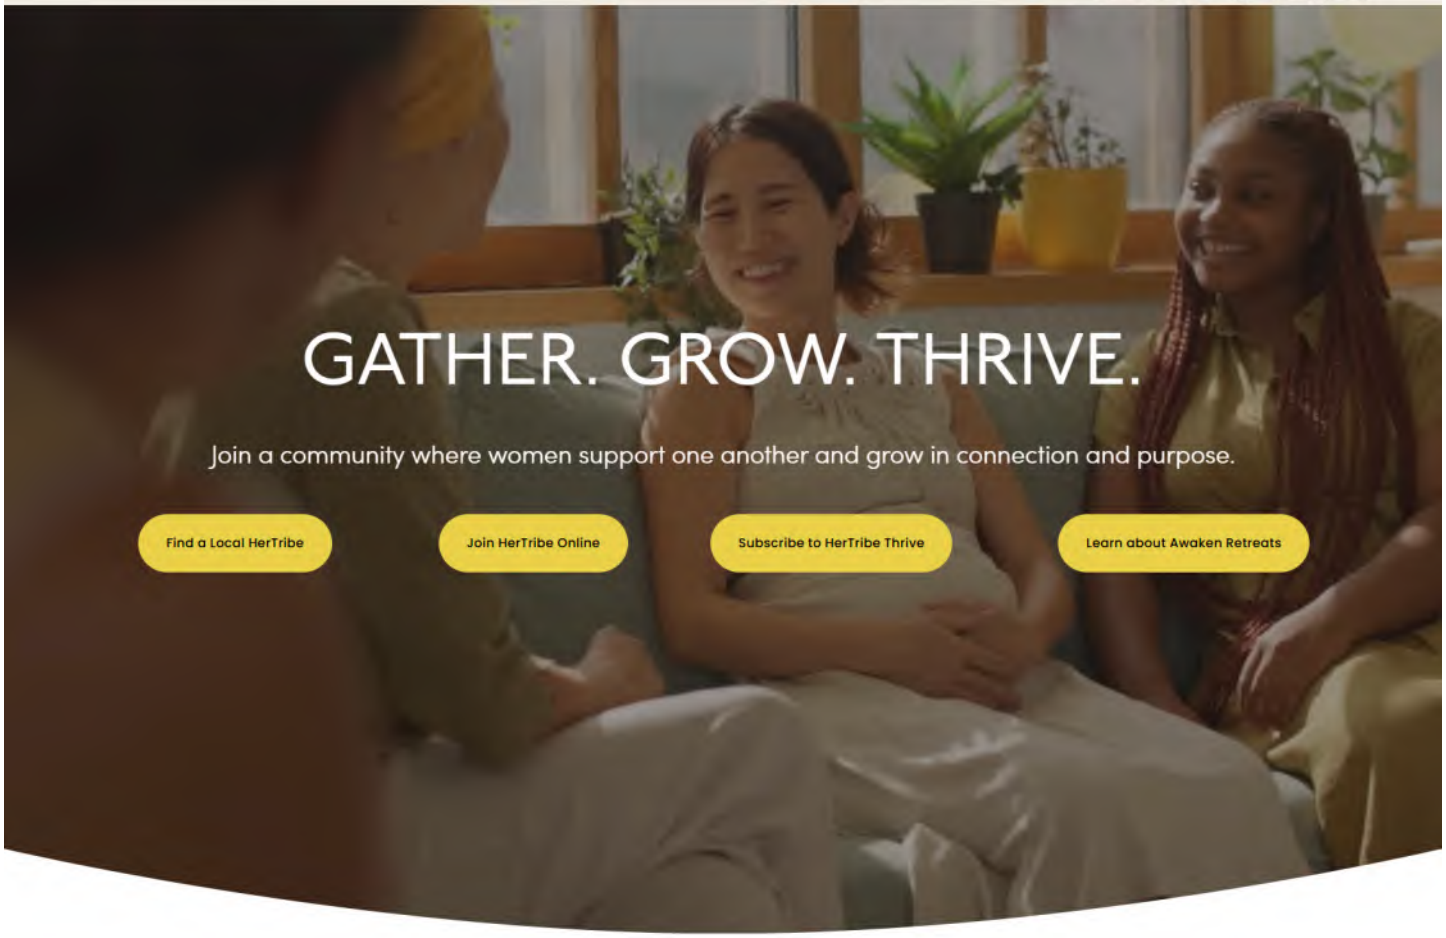

HerTribe Online is beginning again, every third Wednesday of the month from September through December, check out our events page to sign up today! https://www.wfwp.us/events

〈 HERTRIBE QUARTERLY IMPACT REPORT (JULY - SEPTEMBER 2024)

WHAT COLOR IS YOUR DAY?: SIMPLE WAYS TO ADD MINDFULNESS TO YOUR DAY 〉

48 8TH AVE. SUITE 1115, NEW YORK, NY 10011 - INFO@WFWP.US

COPYRIGHT © 2024, WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA - ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PRIVACY POLICY.

GATHER. GROW. THRIVE.

Join a community where women support one another and grow in connection and purpose.

Find a Local HerTribe | Join HerTribe Online | Subscribe to HerTribe Thrive | Learn about Awaken Retreats

WHAT IS HERTRIBE?

HerTribe is a community where women build real friendships, support one another, and grow together in their unique journeys of womanhood. In small, local meetups, women gather for meaningful conversation, shared reflection, and authentic connection rooted in compassion and peace. HerTribe gatherings are inspired by Mother Han's peace philosophy on true womanhood—encouraging women to embrace their inherent value, cultivate inner peace, and express strength with humility and love.

In addition to regular local HerTribe meetups, we offer pathways to deeper transformation through the Awaken Retreats—designed to uplift, renew, and empower women at every stage of life. Each year, women from across the country gather for a national Awaken Retreat, while local communities also host one-day Awaken experiences. Click below to find out when the next retreat will be held.

Find a HerTribe Near You | Learn More about Awaken Retreats

VOICES FROM HERTRIBE

KAORI BECKER | COLUMBUS, OH

MEADOW TALLAKSON | CLIFTON, NJ

GABBY HORIBE | SAN LEANDRO, CA

DO

"The young women in our community, both moms and young wives in the 25-35 yr old range, really enjoyed reading and reflecting on Mother Moon's words, bonding as women together, and creating closer ties to each other."

"I didn't understand the impact of how important this was until we started talking together. These Her Tribe gatherings are a time for women to relax, center ourselves, feel empowered by Mother Moon's words and then go out into the world and do what we need to do."

"We could go so deep into one paragraph and share personally what is going on in our lives with some laughter and tears. It was very reflective for me also as I was thinking about my own life."

"This was an ar connections a environment

THRIVE BLOG

Explore stories, reflections, and simple tools from women in the HerTribe community. The Thrive Blog shares monthly encouragement to help you stay grounded and connected. You can also subscribe to get the HerTribe Thrive newsletter delivered straight to your inbox for free.

HerTribe Quarterly Impact Report (July - September 2026)

During the third quarter of 2026 (July–September), HerTribe meetings experienced a natural summer lull due to vacations, travel, and the start of the school year. Still, many tribes made the most of the season, creating space for connection, compassion, meaningful sharing, and personal growth.

Read more →

HerTribe Thrive

Standing Our Ground as Women, so Others Can Too

A reflection on the power of collective action and the women who paved the way for greater rights and opportunities. An invitation for today's women to carry that work forward by creating meaningful change.

Read more →

HerTribe Thrive

What Color Is Your Day?: Simple Ways to Add Mindfulness to Your Day

Explore the power of color through a simple, creative activity designed to help you slow down, notice your surroundings, and reflect on how you're feeling.

Read more →

HerTribe Thrive

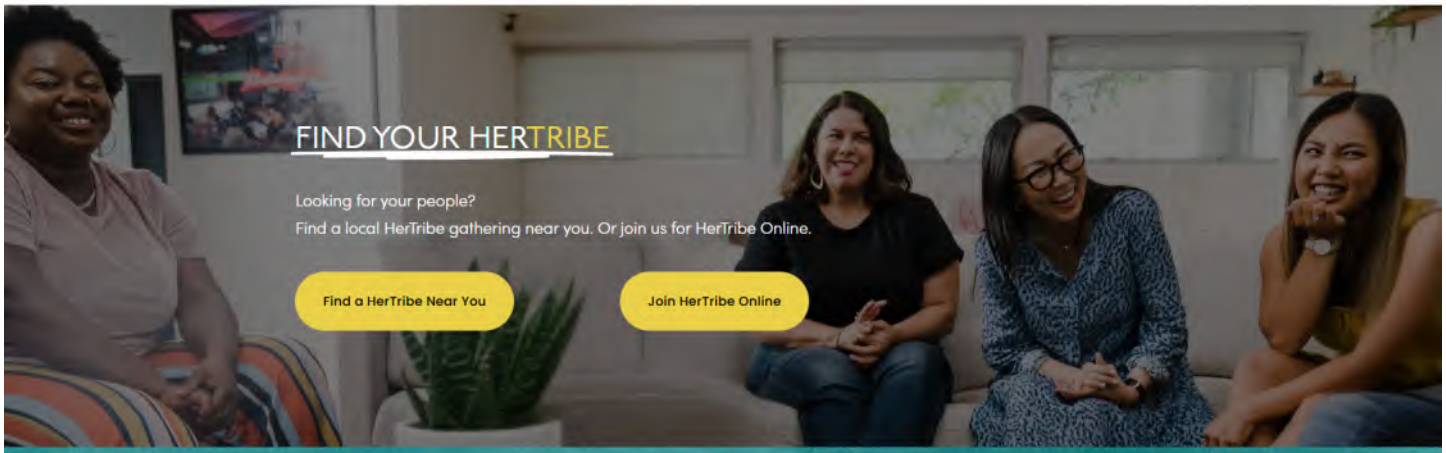

Fall Flavors in a Cup: Four Cozy Drinks to Welcome the Season

This month, we're bringing a little autumn magic to your cup with four seasonal drink recipe cards, available to print from our Member's Hub!

Read more →

HerTribe Thrive

Read more from HerTribe Thrive

FIND YOUR HERTRIBE

Looking for your people?
Find a local HerTribe gathering near you. Or join us for HerTribe Online.

Find a HerTribe Near You

Join HerTribe Online

INTERESTED IN BRINGING HERTRIBE TO YOUR COMMUNITY?

No HerTribe nearby?

You can start one.

We'll walk with you step-by-step and provide everything you need to create a warm, meaningful space where women feel seen, supported, and connected.

Start a HerTribe

WHERE WOMEN THRIVE

Receive monthly encouragement, simple resources, and heartfelt inspiration from women navigating work, family, and personal growth. HerTribe Thrive helps you stay grounded and connected.

CONTACT INFORMATION

First Name *

Last Name *

Email *

someone@website.com

I want to receive emails at this address

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

What are you most interested in? (click all that apply)

- Community with other
- Empowered motherhood
- Happy marriage tips
- Healthy work/family balance
- Personal growth as a woman

I'm not a robot

reCAPTCHA

Sign up

Upon submitting this form, you will be added to our email list for monthly HerTribe Thrive. You can unsubscribe at any time. We will never share your information with other parties.

48 8TH AVE. SUITE 1215, NEW YORK, NY 10001 - INFO@WFWP.US

COPYRIGHT © 2024, WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA - ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PRIVACY POLICY.

UPCOMING EVENTS

View Past Events

OREGON - BRIDGE OF PEACE

11:30 AM – 4:00 PM
2620 Hughes Drive, West Linn, Oregon, 97068, United States (map)

Join WFWP Oregon for a meaningful Bridge of Peace Ceremony on October 18th—a special gathering that brings people together in friendship, understanding, and peace.

View Event →

OCTOBER HERTRIBE ONLINE

8:30 PM – 10:00 PM

Join us for the HerTribe Online Fall Semester, October 21st at 8:30 PM ET!

View Event →

NOVEMBER HERTRIBE ONLINE

8:30 PM – 10:00 PM

Join us for the HerTribe Online Fall Semester Wednesday, November 18 at 8:30 PM ET!

View Event →

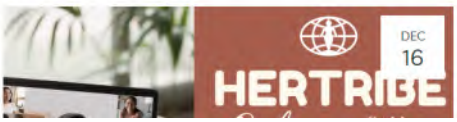

2026 NATIONAL AWAKEN RETREAT

The Hideaway Inn and Conference Center (map)

Rejuvenate at our national Awaken Retreat Thursday, Dec 3rd - Sunday, Dec 6th, in Colorado, to empower women to uplift and inspire women to their divine value and sacred sisterhood.

View Event →

DECEMBER HERTRIBE ONLINE

8:30 PM – 10:00 PM

Join us for the HerTribe Online Fall Semester, Wednesday, December 16 at 8:30 PM ET!

View Event →

48 8TH AVE. SUITE 1115, NEW YORK, NY 10011 - INFO@WFWP.US

COPYRIGHT © 2024, WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA - ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. PRIVACY POLICY.