

Belvedere and buses

Andrew Love

June 6, 2016

Hello team New Hope,

I wanted to stop and acknowledge some wonderful and some frustrating events that transpired yesterday.

First off, for all of those who were able to witness the many miracles yesterday, please keep those etched in your hearts. Some forecasts were calling for hail storms and tornados with and all forecasts that I saw were declaring thundershowers with lightning bolt emojis all over the place. To see the fact that the rain held out until True Mother had left the stage was uncanny, to say the least. There were also several members that reported seeing a rainbow hovering over the Melford Center upon returning home from the event.

On the other hand, an entire busload of people was stranded next to a bus that refused to revive. I am incredibly sorry for the fact that those of you who made the effort to wake up early to support our True Mother weren't able to see her. Our teachings state that in order for blessings to come, there must be a price to be paid. If it is any consolation, I believe that you paid indemnity for the event to go as it did. My multiple reports said that although the situation was beyond frustrating, the overwhelming majority of you remained optimistic until the end.

We really surpassed our goal of support as a local community, but we also exceeded our district and national goals as well. Numbers aside, what happened was that we rallied our support and stood up for True Mother during this crucial time in history. That is a victory. Those of you on the broken bus definitely contributed to yesterday's success and I thank you so much!

Other than that, I ask that all of those of you who were able to make it to the event- please share your testimonies, photos, videos the people who couldn't make it. Please send content to this email address and I will forward it to the entire community so we can all bask in the beauty of the day.

Thank you so much for your offering everyone! A full monetary refund will go out to everyone who paid for Bus and Event tickets.

God be with you.

Andrew.