

Blessing, Intimacy and Dancing

Maria Dolor Barbosa das Graças
December 5, 2010

Last November 28, we had our blessed couples' event, organized by the Blessed Family Department of Brazil. Twenty one couples participated in the Power of the Heart Lecture. The discussion among women liberated many hearts and one, almost separating from her spouse, wants to give a try to continue her blessing.

The evening was so beautiful, the couples danced along with the music. I was wondering how many couples ever had such opportunities to be so free and intimate to each other! I could feel in that moment God's big smile, enjoying the heavenly scene!

So valuable is our companionship, having time for what is essential in a relationship. Getting away from routines that unconsciously for sure will turn us to be so indifferent.

This quote from Heung Jin Nim that I received by e-mail made me deeply think for us to truly give value so much to the blessing:

"The more a husband and wife are united, the more successful they will be, because they will attract and make a base for God's power to come. Without Mother, Father could not be the Messiah. So whatever your mission, however important your duties, or however, unimportant you may feel, the truly most important thing is the degree of love and unity that you are making in your own marriage." pg 155 in "The Victory of Love".

And there was a reflection with that quote and it says:

"Heung Jin Nim told us often enough that heart and love are the key. And he wants us to spread this love in our movement, he wants us to make a revolution of love. And he said that this revolution has to start in the blessed families. Heung Jin Nim points out how important love and heart between husband and wife are. This relationship is the basis for the second generation and if husband and wife don't make effort to build a heartistic relationship, then how can they give education of heart to the children. It may take a long time to create unity and love under adverse conditions, but just the effort alone is so precious. God can work on this foundation of effort already. As long as we try to put true love in action, God has a base to work, and in spirit world as well. As long as we make effort to practice unconditional unchanging love, God's blessing can shower down."

So precious are those words of Heung Jin Nim and the reflection. Reminding me to make precious and heartistic efforts to not lose what's precious, to not lose what God has given to me, and that's the blessing.

Blessing, how precious it is! How precious is my spouse! And every single step I make to let it flourish is so precious to God!

Thank you so much, dear God and our True Parents!