

FFWPU Europe and the Middle East: Japan Tried to But Failed to Kill Our Church

Knut Holdhus
April 5, 2026

AI illustration of Family Federation members gathering on a Sunday in a park in Japan after ban on the use of hundreds of church properties

After ban on use of hundreds of church properties, members gather in bingo halls, parks, and living rooms and talk of stronger bonds in hard times

Tokyo, 4th April 2026 - Published as an article in the Japanese newspaper Sekai Nippo. Republished with permission. Translated from Japanese. Original article.

[Part 1 of a Series] In Search of a Spiritual Anchor - One Month After the Dissolution of the Family Federation

Bonds of Faith Strengthen as Churches Close

Believers Shocked by Sudden Arrival of Liquidators

by the Religious Freedom Investigative Team of the editorial department of Sekai Nippo

Published 5th April 2026 at 11:21 pm, updated 6th April 2026 at 8:08 am

See part 2 of the series: Transparency Concerns: Non-Disclosure of Records

It has been one month since the Tokyo High Court upheld the order to dissolve the religious corporation of the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (formerly the Unification Church), and liquidation procedures began. While believers have lost their places of worship and prayer, some say that "the bonds between members have grown even stronger." This report follows developments among those connected to the group and its followers.

See also Experts Question Legal Basis for Dissolution

See also Paper Reveals Hidden Story Behind Dissolution

See also Japan: "Death Penalty" Without Proof of Illegality

On Sunday, 29th March, as cherry blossoms began to bloom, a group of people gathered on blue tarps in a park somewhere in the Kanto region for a flower-viewing party. "Long time no see," they greeted one another warmly. Among the group - comprising several dozen people - were slightly older men and women, couples with small children, and university-aged young people. A man in his forties who appeared to be a leader encouraged the group, saying, "These are difficult times, but today let's enjoy games and lunch together," lifting everyone's spirits.

AI illustration of Sunday worship service held by Family Federation members in a park in Japan 5th April 2026

Those gathered were members of the Family Federation, who until February had attended Sunday services at a local church facility. However, following the High Court decision on 4th March, a court-appointed liquidator seized the group's religious facilities nationwide.

On social media, many believers posted about the loss of their churches and the inconvenience it caused. At the same time, some reported holding services in each other's homes or renting spaces such as event rooms or karaoke rooms to gather.

As the timing coincided with the graduation and school entrance season, events celebrating children were also held in various locations. A woman in her 30s living in the Tokyo metropolitan area, whose child participated in a graduation event, said,

"My child will start elementary school this spring, so they seemed very happy. I want to make a fresh start and do my best."

In some cases, liquidators arrived at church facilities less than an hour after the High Court decision was reported.

"It was a huge shock that something so ordinary - gathering together and sharing meals - suddenly became impossible," said Kimihiro Okamitsu (岡光君啓 - 46), who served as the head minister of the Shinjuku Family Church (Takadanobaba, Tokyo), which had more than 400 members.

On 4th March, about 20 believers were watching a live broadcast from in front of the Tokyo High Court in the church sanctuary. When the announcement of the group's dissolution came shortly after 11 a.m., Okamitsu recalled, "The atmosphere was suffocating. No one in the sanctuary could move or speak for a while." At that moment, a staff member informed him that "15 to 20 representatives of the liquidator had already arrived and had been shown into the building," leaving him stunned.

The lawyers representing the liquidator explained that they would take over all bankbooks and cash in safes, verifying them against accounting records and data. They also announced that entry into the church facility would be prohibited. However, there was one issue: funerals for believers had been scheduled for the following two days.

Okamitsu negotiated with the representatives, and as an "exception" for funerals, permission was granted to proceed as planned - but with many restrictions. "We were told that as staff we were prohibited from conducting religious ceremonies, so we should participate only as individual believers," he said.

One believer asked to offer prayers in the prayer room during the funeral, thinking access might be allowed, but this request was denied. There were also negotiations to use the church facility as a relay venue for couples unable to travel to South Korea for a mass wedding ceremony scheduled in May, but permission for that was also denied.

Currently, Okamitsu has been instructed by the liquidator to remain at home, with little additional guidance. "Religious activities as individuals are not prohibited," he noted, so they have been managing by filming sermons on Sundays in borrowed homes for believers to watch online.

AI illustration of Sunday worship service held by Family Federation members in a park in Japan 5th April 2026

Regarding the difficulty of obtaining permission to conduct religious activities in church facilities, Okamitsu speculated,

"If it were solely the liquidator's decision, it's hard to imagine to be rejected to this extent. They may be trying to avoid having people gather at church facilities due to public opinion."

Kyoko Niiyama (66, pseudonym), a female believer with over 40 years of faith who has belonged to the same church since her marriage in 1992, emphasized,

"The emotional bonds among believers who are hurting have actually grown stronger."

On 20th March, Niiyama attended a barbecue event organized by believers. About 180 members gathered at a park in Tokyo. Many were seeing each other for the first time since the dissolution was finalized, and Niiyama felt a strong sense of relief. She said with a smile.

"Some people were so moved that they spontaneously hugged each other. We may have lost the building, but it made us realize that the foundation of our faith was right here."

See part 2 of the series: Transparency Concerns: Non-Disclosure of Records

See also Experts Question Legal Basis for Dissolution

See also Paper Reveals Hidden Story Behind Dissolution

See also Japan: "Death Penalty" Without Proof of Illegality

See also Shocked Author: "Japan Ignores Basics of Justice"

See also Scholar Questions Secrecy in Dissolution Case

Related to ban on use of churches: Lawfare: State Uses Legal System in War on Faith

More, related to ban on use of churches: Scholar Questions Secrecy in Dissolution Case

And more, related to ban on use of churches: Shocked Author: "Japan Ignores Basics of Justice"

Still more, related to ban on use of churches: Legal Inconsistencies A Blow to Democracy

Even more, related to ban on use of churches: Japan: Court Accused of Using Speculation

Also related to ban on use of churches: MEXT's Legal Spin and "Dissolution at All Costs"

Also related to ban on use of churches: UN Report: Japan's Lawfare Against Faith Minority

And also related to ban on use of churches: Protesting No Transparency in Closed-Door Trial

More, related to ban on use of churches: Dangerous Flaws in Dissolution Order Decried

Also related to ban on use of churches: "Lawyers Lying and Shaming Japan" for 50 Years

And also related to ban on use of churches: Japan Following the Way of China

And also related to ban on use of churches: Japan's Dissolution Case Echoes China's Playbook

More, related to ban on use of churches: Media/Legal Expert: Communism Behind Persecution

And more, related to ban on use of churches: Militant Lawyers Dictate Government Policy

More, related to ban on use of churches: Collusion to Rob Minority of Its Rights

And more, related to ban on use of churches: State and Media Creating "Today's Non-Citizens"

Still more, related to ban on use of churches: Japan Copying China: State Seizure of Churches

And still more, related to ban on use of churches: 12 Religious Freedom NGOs Denouncing Japan

More, related to ban on use of churches: 4300 Abductions and Forcible Detentions

And more, related to ban on use of churches: Japan: Families Fear for Graves of Loved Ones

Yet more, related to ban on use of churches: Lawyers Manipulating, Coercing, Lying

Also related to ban on use of churches: Kishida Follows Anti-Family Federation Minister

Also related to ban on use of churches: Militant Lawyers Dictate Government Policy

Still more, related to ban on use of churches: Malicious One-Sided Government Source Selection

And still more, related to ban on use of churches: Japan Urged to Make U-Turn

And yet more, related to ban on use of churches: Dangerous Precedent to Crush Religions

Even more, related to ban on use of churches: Japan Following the Way of China

Yet more, related to ban on use of churches: Japanese Communists' Final War

Still more, related to ban on use of churches: Political and Social Activism behind Oppression

Still more, related to ban on use of churches: Dissolution Case: Rule of Law on Trial 4th March

A 2026 Nobel Nomination And Democratic Maturity

April 4, 2026 • Knut Holdhus

Share:

f

▶

▶

▶

▶

✉

Hak Ja Han’s Nobel nomination and international recognition spark reflection on South Korea’s democratic maturity and social complexity

On 31st March 2026, the Korean newspaper Segye Ilbo published a religious affairs column reflecting on a recent and somewhat controversial development: the nomination for the Nobel Peace Prize of Hak Ja Han (한학자), leader of the Family Federation for

세계일보
The logo of the Segye Ilbo

More Posts

Transparency Concerns: Non-Disclosure Of Records

April 6, 2026

Beyond The Ban Believers Sustain Community

April 5, 2026

South Korea’s Slide Toward Authoritarianism

April 3, 2026

7,000 Protesting Proposed Anti-Religious Law

April 2, 2026

Paper Reveals Hidden Story Behind Dissolution

April 1, 2026

July Verdict Likely – Long Appeals Process Looms

April 1, 2026

Mother Han Nominated For Nobel Peace Prize 2026

March 31, 2026

Search

Q

Prize of Hak Ja Han (한학자), leader of the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification – in Korea often referred to as Unificationism (통일교). Rather than focusing narrowly on whether she deserves the prize, the article uses this moment to explore a broader and more meaningful question – what this nomination reveals about the current state and maturity of South Korean society.

The article begins with a simple but important observation: evaluating any prominent individual is rarely straightforward. This is especially true for figures whose lives intersect multiple domains such as religion, politics, and international activism. Such individuals tend to attract a wide range of opinions, often shaped by differing values, cultural contexts, and historical experiences. In this case, the nomination of Hak Ja Han – also called Mother Han – is not presented as a definitive endorsement of her legacy, but as a lens through which to examine how diverse perspectives coexist within a modern democratic society like South Korea.

A key point emphasized is that being nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize does not mean one will win it. Thousands of nominations are submitted annually, and Nobel Peace Prize nominations are not officially public. Publicizing a nomination is often regarded as a self-promotional or advocacy act by nominators or affiliated groups. That might be one reason why there has been little mention of the nomination of Mother Han in South Korean mainstream media.

Still, religious affairs correspondent Jeong Seong-su (정성수), the writer of the Segye Ilbo column, regards the nomination process itself as significant because it reflects, as he puts it, “evaluation grounded in values and standards shared by the international community.” The person who nominated Mother Han, Ján Figel, is highlighted as someone with considerable international credibility:

“Dr. Ján Figel served as the chief negotiator for Slovakia’s accession to the European Union and later became the country’s first European Commissioner – an influential figure. Furthermore, he has worked as the European Union’s Special Envoy for the promotion of freedom of religion or belief, addressing issues of religious freedom and human rights in the international community.”

Religious affairs reporter Jeong Seong-su (정성수). Photo (2025): Segye Ilbo

Jan Figel, European Union’s Special Envoy for the promotion of freedom of religion or belief 2016-2019, here in July 2023. Photo: FOREF

The article suggests that his background in European politics and his role in promoting religious freedom lend weight to his decision. His nomination should not, however, be seen simply as personal support, but as an assessment grounded in internationally recognized values such as peacebuilding, interfaith dialogue, and human rights.

According to the column, Figel’s nomination letter praises Mother Han’s lifelong efforts in promoting global peace, encouraging dialogue between religions, and advocating for strong family values as a foundation for social cohesion. The nomination letter also notes her involvement in initiatives related to peace on the Korean Peninsula, as well as her organization’s engagement in cultural and diplomatic activities aimed at fostering international understanding. One specific example mentioned is the Women’s Federation for World Peace, an organization she founded, which holds consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC). This detail is used to illustrate how a movement that originated in Korea has gradually gained recognition within established international institutions.

However, the article does not ignore the fact that Mother Han and her organization remain controversial within South Korea. There are ongoing legal issues and continued public debate surrounding the group’s activities and influence. These domestic criticisms are

Categories

Send us a message

First Name *

Last Name

Email *

Email Address

Your Message *

Submit

the group's activities and influence. These domestic criticisms are presented not as contradictions to the nomination, but as part of a larger democratic process. The author argues that disagreements and scrutiny are natural in a society where multiple value systems coexist. In fact, the presence of such debates is framed as evidence of South Korea's institutional strength and resilience. Over time, Korean society has developed mechanisms – legal, political, and social – for addressing complex and sensitive issues involving religion and public life.

The column encourages readers to view the nomination not as a final judgment, but as a meeting point of different evaluative standards. On one side are international perspectives that may prioritize certain contributions to peace and global cooperation. On the other side are domestic viewpoints shaped by local history, media coverage, and personal experiences. Rather than forcing a single conclusion, the article suggests that acknowledging this diversity of perspectives is itself a sign of a mature society.

This idea is further expanded by placing the discussion in the broader context of South Korea's rapid development. Within a relatively short period, the country has transformed from a war-torn nation into a major economic power with a well-established democratic system. Throughout this transformation, religion has played varied and sometimes conflicting roles. It has contributed to social unity in some instances, while in others it has been a source of controversy or division.

The important point, according to the article, is that these experiences have collectively strengthened society's ability to handle complexity. Instead of suppressing differences, there has at least until recently been a growing tendency to address them through open discussion and formal procedures. Hopefully, such a situation is allowed to continue in spite of the current Lee Jae-myung (이재명) administration seemingly taking the country in an authoritarian direction.

Finally, the article reflects on how South Korea today operates at the intersection of domestic and global standards. As the country becomes more integrated into the international community, it increasingly encounters situations where external evaluations differ from internal perceptions. These differences, however, are not necessarily harmful. The author argues that they can serve as opportunities for mutual reflection. International viewpoints can prompt Koreans to reexamine their own assumptions, while domestic experiences can provide deeper context for outsiders trying to understand Korean society.

The nomination of Hak Ja Han (한학자) is presented not as a simple story about one individual's achievements or controversies, but as a moment that highlights the complexity and maturity of South Korea as a society. It raises important questions about how different values are balanced, how public debates are conducted, and how a nation positions itself within a global framework.

Regardless of whether the nomination leads to an award, the article suggests that the real significance lies in how people, media, and institutions respond to what some may perceive as a controversial nomination. By “engaging thoughtfully with differing perspectives”, the writer is pointing to norms like open debate, tolerance of disagreement, and critical scrutiny. A controversial nomination is a stress test for democratic maturity. If society responds with reasoned debate rather than reflexive polarization, that's more valuable than the award outcome itself. The nomination becomes a case study in democratic culture rather than just a question of merit.

See also 7,000 Protesting Proposed Anti-Religious Law

See also Global Clergy Visit Detained Mother Han

See also More Humanity Even in A Communist Prison?

Text: Knut Holdhus, editor

Aggressively taking the country in an authoritarian direction:
Lee Jae-myung,
President of South Korea since 4th June 2025.
Photo: Jeonnam Provincial Government / Wikimedia Commons.
Public domain image.
Cropped

Featured image above: Mother Han speaking at a large peace rally in Seoul Olympic Stadium 11th November 2017. Photo: Graeme Carmichael

See also In Tiny Solitary Cell: Irreversible Harm Caused

See also Religious Freedom Threat: China-Led Alliance

See also Gingrich Warns Against State Control of Faith

See also Domino Effect of Religious Persecution in Asia

See also Unificationism, Industry, and Cold War Survival

See also Current Korean Situation: Context and Key Issues

See also Court: Prosecutors' Overreach in Politicized Case

See also S. Korea's Troubling Pattern of Selective Probes

See also Unificationism Emerging as a World Religion

See also Alarm Over State Interference in Religion

Related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Mother Han's December Trial: Long Detention Ahead

Also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: A 10-Minute Visit to Mother Han in Detention

Also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Denying Allegations: Hak Ja Han \(82\) in Inquiry

Also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: SKorean Court's Sharp Criticism of Prosecutors

And also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Detention: Harsh Cell Conditions Spark Outcry

More, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Ugly: Arrest Warrant Sought for Hak Ja Han \(82\)

And more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Critics Warn of "Authoritarian Drift" in SKorea

Even more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Court Decision to Prolong Detention Condemned

Still more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Co-Founder, 82, Questioned 9 Hours by Prosecutors

Also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Democratic Party's Assault on Family Federation

And even more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Mother Han \(82\) in Poor Health in Damp, Cold Cell

And still more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Korean Crisis: "True Democracy Must Serve Heaven"

And yet more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Faith Leaders Protest State Assault on Religion

Also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: News Release Blasts Indictment of Hak Ja Han, 82

More, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: 70 Years On: Detention History Repeats Itself

And more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Trump Raises Alarm Over Church Raids in Korea

Even more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Mike Pompeo Calls Probe of Co-Founder "Lawfare"

Still more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Korean Faith Crackdown: USA Urged to Confront It

Yet more, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Korean Bribery Scandal: Media Clears Federation

And also related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Raids Blur Line Between Justice and Politics

More, related to Nobel nomination and democratic maturity: Heavy-Handed Raid on Sacred Sites Condemned

