

Tejas Trails Now “Hiring” Volunteers

Ken Morgan
April 27, 2011

Dear Rev. Hernandez,

Thank you for your incredible support and friendship which has helped sustain me these many years.

I've put together a letter requesting helpers for our camp. I've realized that I should be extra clear about what goes on here day to day, (it is a demanding schedule) and not be overly expressive of all the inspirational aspects. I am very committed to this project and believe profoundly in it's heavenly potential. There is no way however, even with substantial help and 100% effort that I can complete it by January 2013 but that is my goal. I only ask people to pray about this and see where Tejas fits in with the numerous providential priorities. I am attaching my internship doc as well as pasting it below. I will be trying to post this at BF.org etc. but do you think you can send this attachment out to the district?

Thanks again and God bless,

Ken Morgan

Tejas Trails Now “Hiring” Volunteers

Tejas Trails is a two hundred acre Unificationist Culture/Open to the Public Camp, Nature Park and Event Center in central Texas (see web below). We've been developing it for several years completing over 10,000 square feet of buildings including Main Hall, Bath House, six Cabins, Dormitory, and Recording Studio along with extensive grounds management. I'm considering going 501 3C, but at present we're on our own; privately owned but with a very public motivation and purpose. Our vision is large, but my wife and I alone, if we're to keep with God's timetable and essentially "finish" by January 2013, can not achieve it---and this is where you come in. I am looking for a few highly motivated volunteers, short or long term, to help out. Life here isn't for everybody, but it might be just the thing for you. Projects such as full tilt organic farming, building a basketball court, wood kiln, native hardwood furniture shop, greenhouse, library/exhibit hall, sauna, metal and wood 'shops', creative arts studios, zip lines etc. are very exciting, but the road to realizing these exciting results is lined with years of daily perseverance and hard work. Oh, and did I mention that I can't pay you? That's right, all I can offer is a chance to make a difference, to learn a ton of skillsets, put in some outrageous mind/body hours in helping to create a place where the miracle of life and purpose of creation can be broadly shared.

While I believe in fun and am easy going, I thrive among people who are tough self starters with an idealistic flair. A typical day will include HDH, six hours of work, good food, free time and fellowship. Sunday is for worship & personal details and Saturday is ½ day. We normally drive in to Austin for church and each month we combine with San Antonio members for "Music Sunday" at Tejas. There are about 10 church families in our community, but we've very spread out and here at Tejas Trails for now at least there's no BCs. All things to consider.

That said, if you can see yourself in this picture, please give me a call and let's talk about it. There's also bookkeeping, website development, marketing, Tejas Provisions sales, botanical and natural resource research etc. for the less outdoors person.

Thanks for listening and have a great day.

Ken Morgan

www.camptejatrails.com