Although their activities are circumscribed by the complex political landscape, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) can play a significant role in promoting peace in the Middle East by facilitating dialogue and reconciliation processes between conflicting groups, advocating for policies that reduce conflict, providing humanitarian aid, and highlighting human rights abuses. Their efforts foster understanding and build trust at the grassroots level.

Join us as we highlight recent efforts, together with a distinguished panel of NGO leaders with frontline experience bringing hope and comfort to those suffering from war and natural disaster.
