

Native Korean speakers: Support free online Korean language classes

Jun Orikasa
June 22, 2016

Pastor Jun Orikasa of the Norman Family Church in Oklahoma is looking for native Korean speakers who are interested in supporting his free online Korean language class by recording their voices based on the textbook he has written with fellow instructor, KEA Pastor Rev. Jin Hyung Lee.

Pastor Orikasa's class is held via Zoom, and people all over United States are currently enrolled in this unique, free course to learn the Korean language. This is a basic Korean course, by the end of which students will have a better grasp of the Korean language and will take significant steps forward in being able to communicate with Korean speakers and understand speeches in Korean.

Pastor Orikasa has observed that students could better learn Korean by carefully listening to correct pronunciation of the language. Those native speakers who are interested in supporting the course will be asked to record audio of their speech, which will be sent by Pastor Orikasa, along with other study materials, to the students as they practice at home.

Anyone interested in lending his or her voice for recordings to support the pastors' class can contact Pastor Orikasa at jpstmosk789@gmail.com.

Pastor Orikasa is also willing to provide materials to anyone who wishes to teach Korean in his or her local community, and may be contacted at the same address.