On the 13th of November at the Senate, Sala ISMA, in Rome, the morning session of this conference began with Senator Roberto Rampi and other prestigious speakers proposing a way for the Mediterranean to become a sea which gives life to people and not death - as it was in the past a womb which gave life to new cultures.

In the afternoon, religious leaders reported the importance of dialogue between religions. The pastor from the Waldensian Church and the vice president from Religions for Peace, who was representing also the ADEI WIZO association of Jewish Women in Italy came because of their friendship with WFWP.

Elisabetta Nistri, WFWP Italy Chapter Leader, emphasised the value of the original nature God gave to women and the important role we have to contribute to peace. She also underlined the determination and work of Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, Co-founder of WFWP, who is visiting several countries and meeting the heads of states to plant seeds of peace that can bear precious fruits.
