

DMV Winter Workshop: “I Know My Roots” in Maryland

Ernest Patton
January 14, 2016

The D.C./Maryland/Virginia (DMV) area held one of four themed workshops, which they rotate through so that high school students have a different workshop experience every year. This year’s workshop theme was “I Know My Roots.”

“I was personally so impressed by the kids desire to go deep and experience true ownership over their experience at our workshop this winter,” said a staff member. “Every day the content got deeper and the kids grew closer, and by the end of it I felt such a strong feeling of family.”

Participants who were normally timid were able to open up during their time at the workshop, some even performing at the open mic night and challenging themselves like they never did before. “This testifies to the love and energy that was created at our workshop this year!” said the staff.