Now back to reading on what exciting things our missionaries have been up to!

Senior Class Missionaries

All the investments the senior class missionaries have made are coming to fruition. Over the past month, the missionaries have been working on various projects on the new Spiceland National Youth Campus.

One project is property renovations. Revamping the main pavilion, clearing out trails, and repainting the walls—the campus got a well-deserved facelift.

Another project is Project Orenda, a 2-week summer camp for young adults to deepen their relationship with God through nature and growing friends of faith. The senior class took full ownership of the program, planning and preparing every aspect of the workshop.

They are currently in staff training, with a few mission program alumni joining. Through talks, discussions, and reflection, the Project Orenda staff are preparing themselves, internally and externally, for an amazing experience.

Junior Class Missionaries

Thank you all junior class missionaries for the investment in respective communities!

Reconvening in Indiana once again, the junior class missionaries have now entered the final portion of the Mission program. The group is split into different summer programs that are happening throughout the nation.

Those who are returning for another year, the Seniors-in-Training and team leaders, are heading to Alaska and attending the National Ocean Challenge program.

Most of the other missionaries are traveling coast to coast. Starting at the crossroads of America, they will head east towards New York to go on a pilgrimage, visiting buildings and properties the movement has invested in to understand our history.

Then they will start heading back to the Midwest, attending an adulting workshop in Ohio to pick up some helpful tips and tricks as they head home after Mission.

From there, they will fly to the Pacific Northwest! Going to Washington state, they will join Summit, a young adult workshop where participants will learn about the Divine Principle and experience God’s creation through backpacking.

A few have been selected to staff Project Orenda alongside the senior class. They will step up as older brothers and sisters, guiding younger brothers and sisters to experience God and create friends of faith.

While the year is wrapping up soon, the Mission program is moving fast at full speed!
