food for thought

Choose Growth

As a teenager, I had a mantra of sorts--Life is hard and then you die. Of course, I grew beyond this despondent and depressing outlook on life. However, there are still many times that I resist growth. It is difficult to have hope that I can be more patient, loving, forgiving and joyful. The reality is that growth can be painful, we must acknowledge the wounds, mistakes, and difficult memories of our past. The poet Rumi saw the clear relationship between our wounds and our awakening--our growth. He said, "Don't turn away. Keep your gaze on the bandaged place. That's where the light enters you." The reality is that not to grow is hard and to grow is hard. If it is going to be hard either way, doesn't it serve us to choose growth?
