On November 18, 2023, WFWP USA orchestrated a virtual HerStory Award event, guided by the capable emcee, Ms. Adia Lancaster, Director of New Hope Foundation International.

Ms. Adia extended a welcome to all attendees, remarking, "Tonight is a special night to celebrate the good happening in this world." Quoting author Sally Clarkson, she added, "Celebration is one of the most effective weapons we have against the darkness of our day. When we celebrate, we proclaim the fact that there is still good in the world..."

Next, WFWP USA President, Mrs. Kaeleigh Moffitt took the virtual stage, declaring, "Today is about honoring the stories of women and their contributions to a more peaceful world."

Following these inspiring words, each awardee was introduced by the WFWP member who had nominated them.

The first awardee, Dr. Ester Davis, Producer, Excellence 2000 Host and Producer the Ester Davis Show, shared that women have to know what their real value is and also have to step out in faith. She expressed, "I have always had this creative spirit, this passion for helping people and making things happen." On overcoming challenges she reflected on a creative way she had to get in contact with someone she hoped would sponsor her youth program. She concluded by saying, "I think we should surround ourselves with a lot of people and stretch ourselves and see what happens."

The second awardee, Irma Orozco Deihl, MC, media personality and host, expressed her gratitude for receiving the award and reflecting on the last 15 years in her line of work serving her community. She said, "Although growing up in a home with very little money, my mom always taught me to help someone less fortunate than me. Later in life, I learned there are many who are less fortunate than we were."

The third awardee, Dr. Earnestine Hunt, Chaplain and founder Soul Sisters, reflected on the birth of Soul Sisters and the unique vision that God had placed in her heart. This grew to include many women around the world. She emphasized that the mission of Soul Sisters is to truly understand each other and the way to do that is to share ourselves with each other. "Our heaven is not going to be just black and white. We serve a diversified God, who loves all his children." She concluded by saying, "Whatever Jesus Christ tells you to do, do it."

As we extend our heartfelt congratulations to the awardees, we also express our eagerness to collaborate and partner with them in the shared mission of fostering positive change. Let the tales of these exceptional women continue to inspire and remind us that, guided by the power of true womanhood, we can collectively contribute to a future grounded in reconciliation, diversity, and enduring peace.

Dr. J. Ester Davis grew up in the Houston area with parents who taught her the value of education and service to others. Her father served in World War II and was a patriot, even though the family endured racial segregation and discrimination. They knew that their own value was bestowed by God.

Ester's first job out of college was with the Eastman Kodak Company, and she worked in the New York and Texas markets for 24 years. She graduated from Barbizon Modeling School and was an instructor there for two years. She started The Lace Glove Modeling and Etiquette program for inner-city teens in Dallas. She is the host/producer of the Ester Davis Television Show, currently available on YouTube, dedicated to encouraging positive activities for the sake of a better community.

Ester is a staff writer for the Dallas Post Tribune newspaper and other print and online publications. She earned a doctorate in religious studies in 2017 from Grace International Seminary in Dallas. Her deep faith in God and sincere Christianity have always been front and center in her public activities. Ester has served in many volunteer capacities, including Southwest Regional Director for the National Council of Negro Women. She also served as chair of the Dallas Senior Affairs Commission under four different mayors and has received many honors from the City of Dallas for her ongoing service efforts.

Dr. Davis is known far and wide in Dallas for her compassionate activism, especially on behalf of young people. In 2017, she helped escort a contingent of about 150 inner-city youth to Washington, DC, on a bus tour, for which she raised donations from hotels, local businesses, and others. Many of these youth had never been outside the city of Dallas. Wealthy businesspeople, various politicians, and many others have fallen under the spell of Ester Davis and supported her projects when asked. Ester's hobbies include playing the piano and riding a vintage bicycle around her Oak Cliff neighborhood, where she has lived for over 30 years. She is a faithful attendee at the Greater New Zion Baptist Church and has played piano for their services. She's the widow of a Korean War veteran, and the mother of two sons, two adopted sons, and six grandchildren.

Rev. Dr. Earnestine Hunt was simply blessed to be chosen by the Lord to fulfill his vision. In December 1985, the Lord appeared to her with the vision. Like Moses, she asked why and felt that the task was too big for her. However, the Lord has assured her that her task is simply to obey the call. The vision shall come to pass! She was instructed to write the vision down, to share the vision with the churches, and given specific instructions on what to say and when. Everything that is done in this ministry is divinely inspired by the Holy Spirit. Rev. Hunt is a graduate of Memphis Theological Seminary with a Master's in Divinity. Her WEEP mission includes serving as a Chaplain to apply more of God's healing balm to hurting hearts.

She is a Provisional Elder at three (3) different United Methodist Churches. At two of the churches, the First African American and First African American Pastor in the history of both 100+ yr old churches.
