

The original homeland only welcomes those people who lived for God

Sun Myung Moon

March 10, 1996

Cheon Seong Gyeong, Book 6: Our Life and the Spiritual Realm, Chapter 1: Section 4.7

Photo date and location unknown

The original homeland only welcomes those people who lived for God, were born for others, and lived and died for others. This is the fundamental nature of the original homeland. Therefore, God raised many religions throughout the course of history to train people to seek for the original homeland.

Religions teach people to be humble and meek and to sacrifice because those are the principles of the spirit world to which they are destined to go. Religions have had to train people during their earthly life to qualify for the other world. Therefore, the more advanced religions emphasize a higher level of sacrifice and service in order to raise people in line with the heavenly world through their daily lives. (75-320, 1975.1.16)

No matter how much the parents give to their child, they try to prepare something more to give. Such efforts, which are based on a heart of giving, will prosper. (276-303, 1996.3.10)

Become a person who lives for others. This is the root of the creation and of the formation of the cosmos. (255-176, 1994.3.10)

The person who lives more for others and sacrifices more than others will become the central person. (257-44, 1994.3.13)

If you die, not for your own sake, but for the sake of others, for the world, and for heaven and earth, you will be raised up as the master of the great universe. (49-303, 1971.10.17)

What remains forever is the suffering of a public life. (19-30, 1967.12.10)

I shall chastise those who are not willing to go. Even though I might kick you with my foot, that is my love to enable you to overcome your current miserable situation and present difficulties. (49-303, 1971.10.17)