

The Value of the Sexual Organs

Tyler Hendricks
June 30, 2018

God wants to dwell with us in the physical world. Only here can God's image multiply, God's love substantialize, God's joy return.

Thus, God made man and woman the microcosm of the physical and spiritual realms, the center of the cosmos. What Darwin looked at as a violent world of tooth-and-claw, True Father saw as a wonder-filled process by which the elements of creation enter the human body.

Referring to "the diverse things in creation," Exposition of Divine Principle states, "Their common purpose is realized when they are assimilated into the human body ...and when they participate in the construction of a comfortable living environment for people."

This is a spirit-imbued process, for "matter has within itself elements which resonate with emotion, intellect and will."

The physical body thus encapsulates all the elements found on earth and "the human spirit encapsulates all of the elements found in the spirit world." Thus we are lords of the angels.

"These spiritual realities resonate through the body and manifest themselves as physiological phenomena, ultimately arrive at the center of creation. And that place would be the part that God most valued... "When God was creating human beings, into which part of the body did He invest the greatest creative effort? Was it the eyes, the nose, the heart, the brain?" No, he answered; it was the male and female sexual organs.

Thus, "the place where Adam and Eve become perfectly one in heart and body as husband and wife is also the place where God ...and human beings ...become united. This is the center of goodness, where the purpose of creation is fulfilled."

At the Family Federation's inauguration, True Father no sooner brought up the sexual organs than he proclaimed that "the purpose of the Family Federation for World Peace" is to "earn God's warm applause ...[by] absolutely [respecting] the value of the sexual organs."

Family Federation members, we have our marching orders.

Now think of the angel, a spiritual being, envious and jealous of Adam. Why was he so? Because Adam had a physical body. And of what part of Adam's body was Lucifer envious in particular? That part into which God invested the greatest creative effort. That focal point of love God valued the most. Lucifer was envious of Adam's sexual organ. Lucifer didn't have one. To occupy God's position, he had to possess Adam's.

(Citations: Exposition of Divine Principle pp. 29, 47, 49, 30, 50; Pyeong Hwa Gyeong, p. 213.)