The “status quo camp” includes UN Security Council permanent members USA, the UK and France, the European Union, Korea, Japan and myriad like-minded democracies invested in preserving the current rules-based international order. The “revisionist camp,” led by UN Security Council permanent members China and Russia, includes Cuba, Venezuela, Iran, Belarus and of course North Korea, together with others. While China draws great benefits from the existing order, when it comes to human rights they aid and abet states that commit crimes against humanity, such as North Korea.

What is the way forward? Is the world going to be bipolar (USA vs China) or multipolar? Or is multilateralism the answer to the conditions we are experiencing today? And how do North Korean human rights fit into that conundrum?

Join Asia expert Greg Scarlatou, Executive Director of the Committee for Human Rights in North Korea, along with Ambassador Joseph DeTrani, former U.S. envoy to the six-party talks and Dr. Alexandre Mansourov, professor of security studies at Georgetown, as they examine the global clash of values.

The Washington Brief goes live at at 2 PM ET today (livestream starts at 1:55 PM ET).
