The South Korean intelligence community assesses that North Korea may conduct their seventh nuclear test sometime after the conclusion of the 20th Congress of the Chinese Communist Party and the US congressional elections on November 8. Taking into account Pyongyang's recent missile launches, air power demonstrations, artillery drills near the inter-Korean border, and adamant refusal to engage either Seoul or Washington in any diplomatic talks, the Yoon and Biden administrations have been on alert and ready to respond swiftly and forcefully to any military provocations.
